WH Council Hears New Constitution

A new constitution for the west dormitory area was presented to the West Halls Council last night. The reorganized constitution was proposed to conform with the recently rewritten constitution of the Association of Independent Men and to meet changes made by the housing board concerning the west halls area.

Under the old constitution, each 112 men in the West Halls area were represented by one councilman. Since the housing department has divided several floors in half with fire doors, the residents are cut off from their representatives.

Under the new constitution, geographical areas will be set up, and each of these areas will be represented by one councilman. This will increase the number of representatives on the council.

Also, two representatives at large will be elected to the West Halls board of governors. This places them on the council, according to the new constitution, and gives them a vote in council affairs.

Committee chairmen will not have to be members of the council in order to serve, as was mandatory in the old constitution.

The new constitution must be read to the council once more. The representatives will then take the constitution before their respective units for a vote. The constitution must be passed by two thirds of the 17 units before it can go into effect.

In other business of the council, Frank Simokat, sixth semester electrical engineering major, was appointed social chairman for next year.

The council voted to give a freshman from the west halls area an outstanding freshman award. The recipient will be named at the council banquet tomorrow night in the Terrace Room of the Hetzel Union Building. Keys and other awards will also be presented. James W. Dean, assistant to the dean of men, will be the guest speaker.

Robert Hawk, senior in arts and letters from Petrolia; Robert Larson, junior in business administration from State College; Chester Leone, junior in business administration from Kittanning; and John Hayes, senior in education from Elmira, N.Y., had preliminary hearings before Bellefonte and State College police last Wednesday and Thursday.

Ignored Police
According to Bellefonte police, the four students—in Hawk's car—were driving "recklessly" through Bellefonte streets, Wednesday night. Bellefonte police tried to hail the car, but the men ignored the warnings and drove toward State College. Bellefonte police radioed State College police, who headed the students off as they entered the borough.

State College police forced the car off the road. The students jumped out of the car and hassled with the officers. Police quieted the men, and Pennsylvania State police were called in to transport the group to the Centre County jail in Bellefonte.

Preliminary Hearing
The students spent Wednesday in jail, and were not released until after the preliminary hearing Wednesday night. Bellefonte police said.

At the Bellefonte preliminary hearing, Hawk was found guilty of drunken driving and posted $150 bail. He must appear in court before Sept. 4 to hear sentence passed. Leone and Larson were found guilty of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. Hayes was guilty of disorderly conduct.

At the State College preliminary hearing Thursday night, Hawk pleaded guilty to charges of disorderly conduct and failing to yield the right of way to an officer. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of resisting arrest, and will have to appear before the September session of court to plead his case. Larson, Leone, and Hayes pleaded guilty to charges of disorderly conduct.

Mather Named Sociology Head

The appointment, which was approved at the weekend meeting of the Board of Trustees, will become effective on July 1.

A graduate of Denison University, Dr. Mather received a doctor of divinity degree from Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, Rochester, N.Y., and his master of science and doctor of philosophy degrees, both in rural sociology from Cornell University. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor society.

Extension Center Draws Many Groups

The Extension Conference Center, formerly known as the Temporary Union Building, is now bringing groups from all over the state and nation to the campus.

The center, which forms a part of the University's twelve extension areas, is designed for adult or continued education, rather than undergraduate education. It has sixty conferences, institutes, and short courses scheduled to be held through November and has already held twenty conferences since its opening on March 15.

These conferences bring 35 to 350 representatives to the extension conference centers. Every county in the state, and every state in the Union has been represented at the conferences.

Informal Conferences
Conferences and institutes are the informal order and include discussion periods, lectures, and workshops. Short courses are somewhat formal, involve a more limited field, and are more concentrated than the average undergraduate semester course at the University. The short courses bring men in industry, business, and other occupations sent by companies for continued study in a short period of time.

This week, two conferences are being held. A traffic officers training school, which will continue for two weeks, brought some 35 traffic officers from all over Pennsylvania. A Cuban medical workers conference, with representatives from Cuba sent by the government's Foreign Operations Administration program and conducted by the labor division at the University, is also meeting this week.

200 Accountants
In June, 150 to 200 accountants will study income tax laws at the Annual Tax Institute. Six Engineering Seminars, sponsored by the College of Engineering and Architecture and General Extension, will also be held in June.

The TUB has been completely remodeled since its pre-Hetzel Union Building days. Inside, the walls have been painted and furniture recovered. The exterior has also been painted.

The Extension Conference Center, headed by T. Reed Ferguson, hopes in the future to have over 100 conferences a year in the building, which was formerly a recreation center for students.
