

AIM Board Establishes Recreation Committee; Carlson Named Chairman

The Association of Independent Men's Board of Governors set up a standing recreation committee to cope with athletic and recreation problems of the organization, last night.

Three area council past presidents—James Kennedy of the West Halls, George Mauler of Nittany, and Harry Martini of Pollock—said that their areas did not have adequate facilities.

Mauler pointed out that there was only one ping-pong table in the Nittany area and that there was "a lot of ground, but nothing on it (in the way of recreational facilities.)" Martini cited the need for a recreation center in the East Dormitory area, and Kennedy remarked that "outdoor facilities in the West Dorm area were nonexistent."

Kennedy added that there is "no place at all to toss a ball or play a little football" in his area. The new committee will deal with these problems. Bruce Lieske, AIM president, appointed John Carlson, newly elected president of West Halls Council, chairman of the committee.

In other business, the board went on record of approving a cultural program for the University by a unanimous vote. The vote on the Penn State Series, as pending approval from All-University Cabinet, was 13 to 6 in favor of the proposed setup. Under the proposed plan, each student would be assessed 50 cents a semester for the series and would be entitled to attend all lectures and presentations of the series.

Other business included: the approval of hiring a part time stenographer, who would be paid $1 an hour and guaranteed five hours of work a week; approval of holding a quiet meditation; similar to that of United States Senate; and that the fireside committee, which sponsors informal talks on religious and social problems of independent men, be made a standing committee.

The following appointments by Lieske received the board's approval:

Orientation week committee, William Johnson, Stanley Juras, and Mauler; election committee chairman, Rhymes Humphreys; social chairman, Joseph Janus; parliamentarian and National In-

'My Cup Runneth Over'—What Cup?

With hand outstretched to receive her gold cup in recognition of being chosen outstanding senior in education, Sally Collins, senior in education from Belmont, Mass., was in for a surprise.

Miss Collins has served as secretary of the Education Student Council, and had been keeping the cup until the time of the banquet.

Miss Collins had dashed off to the banquet with other things on her mind, never dreaming she would receive the award. At the grand moment, Miss Collins was asked to produce the cup so it could be officially turned over to her.

She had left it at her room.

Theta Sig to Discuss Plans for Breakfast

Theta Sigma Phi, women's national professional journalism fraternity, will meet at 12:30 p.m. today in McElwain study lounge, Mary Lee Lauffer, past president, has announced.

The group will discuss final arrangements for the breakfast they will sponsor Saturday for the women who will attend the Pennsylvania Press Conference at the University this weekend.

Independent Student Association coordinator, Johnson; World United Student Association representative, Craig Sanders; recreation chairman, Carlson; and handbook circulation committee, Harold Dean.

Morse, Staff Will Lead Parade Today

Adrian O. Morse, University provost, will serve as marshal for the Armed Forces Day parade at 7 tonight. Morse and his staff will march in front of the parade from Shortlidge road to the reviewing stand at the main University entrance on College avenue. Morse will join President Milton S. Eisenhower and David R. Mackey, burgess of State College, on the reviewing stand.

Morse's staff will include Captain Rowland H. Groff, professor of naval science; Colonel Daniel F. Riva, professor of air science and tactics; Colonel Lucien E. Bolduc, professor of military science and tactics; Josephine Groesbeck, advisor to Angel Flight; Philbert Gill, representing veteran's groups.

The parade will conclude a day-long observance of Armed Forces Day by University military groups, veteran's groups, and various civic organizations.

The Army, Air Force, and Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps groups on campus will hold open houses tonight. The three ROTC units will hold open house in the Armory from 7:30 to 9 tonight. In addition, Navy ROTC displays will be exhibited from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in Engineering E.

Groups participating in the parade will assemble separately at 6:30 p.m., and then congregate at the intersection of Shortlidge road and College avenue at 7 p.m. The parade route will follow College up to Burrows road, where the groups will divide and march off separately.

$300 Ag Scholarship Awarded to Williams

David Williams, a sophomore in agricultural economics from McKees Rocks, has been awarded the second $300 scholarship offered by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association.

Williams will be employed by the Farm Bureau for eight weeks this summer at one of the 33 Farm Bureau Cooperative Associations which are scattered throughout the state.

Last year the scholarship was won by Robert R. Miller, junior in agricultural economics from New Albany.

Honesty—

The plan will not be a good preventative for dishonesty because it will either present a challenge to investigate the idea, or it will scare the students, according to Joan Nessler, graduate assistant in physical education.

Mary Ann Raup, freshman in applied arts from Jersey Shore, thinks that the plan will prove effective only if first the faculty strictly enforces it, and then the committee.

The regulations of the plan will give the faculty the right to impose a definite penalty upon the dishonest student, Benjamin Sinclair, senior in arts and letters from State College, says. In the past, instructors have overlooked the offenders because of the indefinite procedure involved in reporting them, he added.

All the students and faculty members seem to feel the plan is worth a try.

men." Evening dances must be held on either Friday or Saturday or nights before holidays and dances may not last later than midnight unless they are approved by the Senate committee on student affairs or unless they are All-University dances.

The Senate regulations also state that all social functions must be provided with at least two adult couples serving as chaperons. The chaperons must be ap-

Cabinet—

Cabinet will take up the revising of the elections code to make completion of next fall's leadership training clinic a prerequisite to election of the five top All-University offices—president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, and junior and senior class presidents.

To Debate New Plan

Cabinet will debate the adoption of the Community Forum Committee's plan to establish a new culture—music series on campus next year. It will be called the Penn State Series, if approved, and will replace the defunct Community Forum. The series would be financed by a student fee of fifty cents a semester.

Robert Spadaro, former Lion party clique chairman, will ask Cabinet to hear a plan to further the promotion of student government to incoming freshmen next semester. The plan will be sponsored by Campus Lion, and State parties, Young Democrats, Young Republicans, and Intercollegiate Council on Government, Spadaro said.

proved by the dean of men and the dean of women.

Pollock said that chapters wishing to remain open during the summer must complete questionnaires which will be mailed to all fraternities as soon as possible.

The questionnaires must be returned to the dean of men's office by June 4 or the houses will not be approved.
