Penn State Claims Waring, Troxell, Others in Music

From Hollywood's movie studios to the stage of New York's Metropolitan Opera Company, former Penn State students have made a name for themselves in the field of music.

One of the best known is Fred Waring, conductor of the Pennsylvanians, and a trustee of his alma mater. Appropriately, William G. Waring, his great grandfather, was one of the founders of the University, which currently is celebrating the centennial of its founding.

Although Waring originally came to the campus in 1920 to study engineering, he soon had a four-piece band called "Waring Banjaztra" which played at student dances and launched him on his career.

Student organizations such as Thespians, a group which presents musical revues, and an orchestra, band and choruses, offered outlets for the talents of many past and present-day collegians.

An older popular favorite, Alexander P. Gray III, starred in such hits of the twenties as "Sally," "No, No, Nanette" and the Ziegfeld Follies. Gray earned an industrial engineering degree in 1912.

On the distaff side, a Penn

State alumna, Barbara Troxell, is one of the world's best-known interpreters of Mozart operatic roles. Miss Troxell entered the University in 1933 to study mathematics, but later became a music major.

She made her debut with the Metropolitan in 1950, and has sung with many of this country's best known symphony orchestras, in addition to concertizing frequently abroad.

Radio and television have also claimed the services of many Penn State music graduates, and the music department is particularly proud of the hundreds of teachers trained under its auspices.

Campus Party Committee

Campus party steering committee will meet at 7 p.m. tomorrow night in 110 Willard to approve appointments to the committee, Allen Davies, clique chairman, has announced.

The meeting will be open to the public.

Only one per cent of the students who concentrate on English, history, or social sciences in college will go into careers in those fields, a study made at the University of Michigan indicates.

They were:

1. The next committee should be ready to operate at the beginning of the fall semester.
2. The committee should sponsor an open house tour of each individual dining hall so that students may better understand the working of the department.
3. The committee should sponsor an open house tour of the food stores building in the early part of the spring semester.
4. The committee's member's names should be published along with information regarding the distribution of suggestion forms.
5. The membership should be changed from one member from each dining unit to two members from each dining unit. Sturdevant said this increasing in the committee's membership would not make it too unwieldy, as some Cabinet members feared.

IFC Writing Contest

Today is the last day for entries in the Interfraternity Council writing contest, "Why Fraternity," according to Carl Saperstein, IFC public relations chairman.

Entries in the contest may be submitted at the Hetzel Union desk.

Phi Kappa Phi Elects Blizzard New President

Dr. Samuel W. Blizzard, associate professor of sociology and rural sociology, has been elected president of Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic honor society. He succeeds Edwin P. Nye, associate professor of mechanical engineering.

Other officers elected by the chapter are Dr. John D. Lawther, assistant dean of the College of Physical Education and Athletics, vice president; Dr. Francena L. Nolan, assistant professor of home management and rural sociology, treasurer; Harold V. Walton, associate professor of agricultural engineering, secretary; and Dr. George L. Leffler, director of planning and research in the College of Business Administration, Journal correspondent.

Members of the executive committee are Dr. Agnes R. McElwee, professor of English composition; Dr. A. Witt Hutchison, professor of chemistry; Charles M. Speidel, professor of physical education; Dr. Alvin R. Grove Jr., associate professor of botany; Glenn A. Marburger, research assistant in Institute of Local Government; and Ralph H. Wherry, professor of insurance and head of the department of commerce.

What young people are doing at General Electric

Young scientist works on new ways to handle "hot" radioactive fuel

Whenever uranium is "burned" in an atomic reactor, certain valuable elements such as plutonium are left behind in the "ash."

These products are highly radioactive, but they must be recovered because of their great value to the atomic energy program.

Alter's Work Is Vital, Important

Alter is doing his job well. He has already received the Coffin Award, General Electric's highest honor, for developing an apparatus that makes possible faster, safer, and more efficient recovery of the valuable elements in the "ash."

The work done by Alter and his group helps lower costs, increase efficiency and expand our knowledge of the chemical processing of spent radioactive fuels.

25,000 College Graduates at General Electric

When Alter came to General Electric in 1948, he already knew the work he wanted to do. Like each of the 25,000 college-graduate employees, he was given his chance to grow and realize his full potential. For General Electric has long believed this: When fresh young minds are given freedom to make progress, everybody benefits—the individual, the company, and the country.

H. WARD ALTER joined G.E. in 1948 at Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory after receiving a B.A. in 1943 and Ph.D. in Chemistry in 1948 at U. of California. He served with the Manhattan Project at Oak Ridge, 1944-46.
