

HUB Survey Shows Three Top Records

By TED SERRILL

Of the thousands of musical composers and performers in the world's history, the three currently most popular among long-playing record enthusiasts at the University are George Gershwin, Dave Brubeck, and Sigmund Romberg.

This conclusion follows if the number of times records have been played from the thousand dollar long playing record collection in the Hetzel Union Building can be judged as an indication of University students' musical interests.

According to Hummel Fishburn, sophomore in business administration and son of Dr. Hummel Fishburn, professor of music and music education, a Gershwin collection of "Rhapsody in Blue," "American in Paris," and "Concerto in F" has been played in the HUB record booths at least 125 times.

Gershwin's nearest competitors are Brubeck's "Jazz at Storeyville," 110 times, and Romberg's "Student Prince," and "Chocolate Soldier," 105 times. Fishburn, who works for the Student Union, has kept a record of how many times each record has been played since they were put in the HUB about March 1. The records were bought and installed by Phi Mu Alpha, men's music fraternity.

Romberg Popular

Fishburn said the popularity or non-popularity of nearly every record can be explained except the inexplicable drawing power of the Romberg album. The record presents songs by Rise Stevens and Nelson Eddy from "The Student Prince" and "The Chocolate Soldier."

Fishburn mentioned the seven or eight "regulars" who come in and listen to records at least once nearly every day. Some of these students, two of them graduates, listen to different records while others hear the same piece over and over again until they have "practically memorized them."

All Time Populars

Jazz records and classical and semi-classical numbers that have always been popular with Americans from record stores to outdoor concerts head the list of often-played records.

A sampling includes Benny Goodman's Carnegie Hall Jazz concert, 83 times; Louis Armstrong "Favorites," 74; George Shearing and his Quintet, 69; Respighi's "Pines of Rome" and "Fountains of Rome," 69; "Oklahoma," 68; Ravel's "Bolero," 73; Leroy Anderson "Favorites," 59; Stan Kenton's "Artistry in

Monument--

(Continued from page two) a collection is a compliment to the University. An example of the attention that can be attracted by art works is the Lion Shrine, gift of the class of 1940. Many people come to the University to see this shrine, Hyslop said.

Sculptor Would Work Here
Hyslop said that if a sculptor were commissioned to do the work, he would probably complete the operation here as it is extremely expensive to move sculptures.

The most recent addition to the campus along this line was the gateway at the corner of Atherton street and Pollock road. The gateway, consisting of two limestone pylons with sculptured heads of the Nittany Lion, was a gift of the class of 1903 at their 50th reunion in 1953.

Rhythm," 59; Dvorak's "New World Symphony," 63; "Kismet," 55; Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," 34, and "Nutteracker Suite and Swan Lake," 46; Richard Wagner's orchestral selections, 43; Debussy "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun," 50; Barodin's "Polovetsian Dances," 50; "South Pacific," 52; and "Carousel," 38.

Two courses given in music, numbers 5 and 6, have definitely caused students to play more classical and semi-classical records than they ordinarily would, Fishburn said.

Although some may listen to the records because they must hear certain records for the two courses, he said, others probably frequent the HUB's music room because they liked what they heard in the classes and wanted to hear more.

Some records in the religious or operatic fields have never been played. However, one record listed in Fishburn's book as being unplayed can boast of a reason other than students' distaste. The record, a history of 2000 years of music, was never recorded in the book listing all the records available to would-be listeners.

Faculty, Staff Members
Faculty and staff members may obtain north stand tickets from the offices of their deans or department heads.

Commencement exercises will get underway with the traditional Baccalaureate Service at 2 p.m. on June 10.

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower will speak at the service. The Chapel Choir has agreed to stay to perform at the ceremony.

Class Day exercises during which the valedictorian and salutatorian speakers will make their addresses and senior honors will be announced and awarded, will be held at 7:30 p.m. June 10.

Promptness Essential
Promptness will be essential at the beginning of the Commencement ceremony because President Eisenhower's address will be broadcast, Kenworthy said.

Seniors and faculty members will assemble at 9:45 a.m. June 11. The procession will start at 10 a.m., and will reach the field at 10:05.

Guests will be urged to take their seats prior to this since the gateways will be in use for the procession.

To Start at 10:25

The ceremony will get underway at 10:25 a.m. President Eisenhower will begin his address to the audience, over the radio, and possibly on television at 10:30 a.m. He is expected to speak between 20 and 25 minutes, Kenworthy said.

The commencement ceremony will be concluded by noon.

In case of poor weather, the ceremony will be delayed, hour by hour. The indoor ceremony will take place only if absolutely essential.

Announcements will probably be made concerning this over radio station WMAJ on the morning of commencement.

Seniors graduating in Army and Navy uniforms and seniors in Agriculture will be seated in section WC of Beaver Field.

Seniors in Business Administration and Chemistry and Physics will sit in section WD. Education seniors will be in section WE. Engineering seniors in section WF.

Seniors graduating in Air Force uniforms and seniors in Liberal Arts will be in section EC. Other Liberal Arts seniors will sit in section ED.

Seniors receiving degrees in Home Economics, Mineral Industries, and Physical Education and Athletics will sit in section EE. Students receiving associate degrees will be in section EF.

Candidates for advanced degrees will be seated on Beaver Field.

Students receiving degrees will be seated in the first 11 rows of the sections on the east and west sides of Beaver Field.

It will be possible for their parents and guests to sit immediately behind them in the upper sections of the stands.

month. Earl Seely, All-University president, will ask Cabinet to finance sending four students to the 1955 National Student Association convention this summer.

The University is still a member of NSA. Seely explained, even though Cabinet voted earlier this semester to drop its affiliation with the group. It will remain a member until its dues for next year become payable.

The appointments of Harold Dean and Julia Mayberry as co-chairmen of the Secretarial Committee will be submitted for approval tonight.
