

Final Gift Suggestions . . .

Memorial Chapel Furnishings; Endowment Fund for Library

By SUE CONKLIN
Editorial on page four

These are fourth and fifth in a series of five articles on the final senior class gift suggestions. Pattee Library is not as large as libraries of other institutions of comparable size, according to Ralph W. McComb, University librarian.

One of the five final gift suggestions by the senior class is a contribution to the library.

McComb said that gifts can be in the form of an endowment or an outright gift. He said that endowments are handled by the administration and are more satisfactory to the library if no restrictions are placed on the manner in which they should be spent.

Needs May Change
McComb explained that endowments are carried over such long periods and the needs may change so that the restrictions of the endowment make it inappropriate.

The class gifts of 1932 and 1935 were endowments to the library. The gift of 1932 was unrestricted, but the gift of 1935 was allocated among the departments. McComb said that he is working now on having an exhibit showing materials acquired as a result of these two gifts.

Outright Gift Considered
McComb suggested that if the class of 1935 wanted to make an outright gift, it could be worked out in consultation with authorities on special features used in a library. He said if the class wished to use the money for books suitable for the different colleges, a committee could be set up to investigate the needs of different departments. If this was its purpose, it would be more profitable to make an outright gift.

He also suggested that the gift could be used to buy special books not easily obtainable in the normal budget. These, and other special items which could be included in the gift, would be worked out in consultation with the senior class. Items included in this category would be expensive, senior class could designate their funds toward. He said it could furnish pews and the furnishing of the nave for the Meditation but useful and would add to the

Centennial Booklet On Sale Today

A Centennial booklet published by the department of public information depicting the course of the University for 100 years will be on sale at the Hetzel Union desk, dormitories, the Nittany Lion Inn, and borough book stores.

On the cover of the booklet is a colored picture of Old Main taken during the autumn. Many photographs of important University events are scattered throughout the booklet. It also contains a sketch of each of the 12 presidents of the University.

Zenda B. Fehrenbach, assistant publicity production manager of public information, did the layout for the booklet and Charles H. Brown, associate professor of journalism, wrote the copy. It is on sale for 25 cents.

prestige of the library, McComb said. He said he felt sure the senior class could be proud of such contributions.

McComb said that at this time he feels that an outright gift would be more beneficial to the library than an endowment fund.

He also mentioned that funds are needed for the planned recreational reading room, and that the class could designate their gift to this purpose.

He said that whatever the gift might be it would carry gift plates and that the centennial theme could be effectively worked out on the gift plates.

According to McComb, President Milton S. Eisenhower has supported an increase in library appropriations and gifts.

Class of '55 may honor the late Helen Eakin Eisenhower in presenting furnishings to the new chapel to be built in her honor.

The Rev. Luther H. Harshbarger, University chaplain, listed the possibilities that the Chapel, could completely furnish the small lounge in the religious program center, or partially furnish the large lounge in the religious program center.

Included in Lounge
Harshbarger said that if the class decided to furnish the large lounge it could finance the carpentry, and supply the furniture, the piano, and the drapes.

He said he thought a gift of the pews and the furnishing of the nave would be the most enduring gift of these choices. Although the gift committee had suggested supplying hymnals, Harshbarger said these have already been supplied by a private gift. He also said that Interfraternity Council has given to pews to the Meditation Chapel.

Organ Given in 1953
If the class decided on the pews and nave furnishings that would complete the monital requirements for the Meditation Chapel, according to Harshbarger. The class of 1953 gave the organ for the Meditation Chapel and the class of 1954 supplied funds for furnishing the chapel.

Mrs. Eisenhower's portrait will be put in one of the two lounges, probably the larger, Harshbarger said. He said that, since this will be an expensive item, part of the gift could be designated for this purpose. Another possibility for the gift is furnishing the library, also in the religious program center. This could be completed with the $9500 available for the gift, according to Harshbarger.

Groundbreaking for the Chapel by Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower took place February 22. President Dwight D. Eisenhower will lay the cornerstone June 11. Harshbarger said he expects the Meditation Chapel and the religious program center to open in September of 1958.

Chem-Phys Dean Not Yet Named

Adrian O. Morse, University Provost, said yesterday that no replacement has been recommended for the post vacated by Dr. George L. Haller, retiring dean of the College of Chemistry and Physics.

Haller tendered his resignation last January to manage the laboratories department of General Electric Company's Electronics Division. The resignation is effective June 30. Haller has served for two years as consultant to the department. He has been dean of the college since 1947.

Morse, who is chairman of a 10-man committee to recommend candidates for the post, said the committee is at present considering candidates.

Fines Must Be Paid In Order to Register

Students who have failed to pay delinquent traffic fines "will not be permitted to register in the fall" unless their fines are paid, Dean of Men Frank J. Simes said yesterday.

According to Simes, 48 students have failed to pay fines for tickets tagged by Campus Patrol.

Simes said the students will receive letters telling of the ultimatum.
