

Fraternity Scholarship Generally Good—Pollock

Fraternity scholarship at the University is higher than the fraternity averages at most other universities and colleges in the country, O. Edward Pollock, assistant dean of men, said yesterday.

However, Pollock warned that all was not sweet and lightness as far as fraternity averages were concerned.

On the whole, he felt the All-University fraternity average and the relative standings of fraternities among themselves was good. But, there was one dark spot, he said.

Spring semester averages of the past four years showed that although the fraternity All-University average has remained fairly constant, more fraternities slipped below the men's All-University average this year than in previous years.

In 1952, 1953, and 1954, the number of fraternities below the average for men averaged 20. But, in the spring semester of last year there were 31 fraternities below the all-men's average.

Because of this slipping, too many chapters seem to be on the downgrade, he said. Many of the chapters at the University have been warned about their scholarship by their national organizations.

If these chapters don't heed the storm warnings, Pollock said, they will have to pay the price.

Two Are Low Continuously

However, consolation lies in the fact that of the low 18 fraternities, only two of them have been there for more than three semesters. There is always a bottom, he said, but it is better if the basement isn't constantly occupied by the same five or six houses.

On the good side of the ledger, Pollock pointed out the consistency with which the fraternity average has stayed above the average for non-fraternity men. During the past four years, the fraternity average has been around the 1.36 mark, while the non-fraternity men's average for the past four years is 1.31, under the old grading system.

Average Important

Pollock said fraternity averages are vitally important to the standing of the University, since fraternities are considered an integral part of the University. Poor fraternity averages cast a bad reflection on the University, he said.

Fraternities must watch their scholarship, he said, because grades are the one very vulnerable point the houses have. Criticism of scholarship is very hard for a fraternity to defend.
