Cabinet to Discuss Penn Half-Holiday

Senior Class president Robert McMillan will report on the subject of a student half-holiday for the Pennsylvania-Penn State football game on Oct. 29 at tonight's session of All-University Cabinet.

However, no probable action will be taken by the body, All-University President Earl Seely said yesterday. The subject will be discussed but nothing definite beyond that will be done, he said. Last week, Cabinet went on record as approving a Penn half-holiday on the Saturday of the game.

Construction Delayed on Animal Lab

Construction of the new animal disease laboratory, which is one-third completed, has been held up because of a lack of structural steel.

The building, originally scheduled to be completed by December, probably will not be finished until early spring, according to H. W. Dunne, professor of veterinary science.

He said there is only a skeleton crew on the job now because of a shortage of steel. Part of the walls have been erected, he said. Work was started last May.

Eventually, all research on animal diseases will be moved to this building, which is located about 150 feet from the present laboratory. The old laboratory will be used for work with poultry diseases.

The new building will be L-shaped. It will consist of a main building 37 feet wide and 148 feet long, with an adjoining wing 39 feet wide and 113 feet long.

One wing will have offices, seven laboratories including a large central laboratory, and locker rooms especially designed to facilitate the changing from contaminated to clean clothes.

A clinical section will include a pharmacy and an examining room for veterinary services on the University livestock.

J. C. Orr, general contractor from Philadelphia, received a $241,000 contract for construction of the building.

Student Major Club Formed

A Student Major Club has been organized in the College of Physical Education and Athletics.

Membership is open to majors in physical education. William Seckinger, senior in recreation from State College, is president of the newly formed group.

The club will hold monthly meetings with guest speakers and demonstrations, and will sponsor two social gatherings a semester. The first social event will be a square dance on Oct. 21 in White Hall.

The purposes of the new club are to bring in professional people in the field of physical education, to better inform the students, and to provide recreation.

Students Will Hold Bonfire Pep Rally Tomorrow at 8

The All-University bonfire pep rally for the Navy-Penn State game will take place at 8 p.m. tomorrow following a parade over the campus.

The site of the rally will be announced tomorrow. The Blue Band, cheerleaders, hatmen and women, and students will form the parade at 7:15 p.m. at Recreation Hall, and move promptly at 7:30 p.m. The hatmen and women will gather students from the dormitories along the parade route.

The bonfire foundation will be built today and tomorrow, and will be topped tomorrow night by a dummy signifying the Navy team.

Fraternal and sororities will attend carrying signs. According to Tony Cline, head cheerleader, there is an intense spirit of rivalry between the groups for the largest sign.

Ike Renews Bid for Military Check

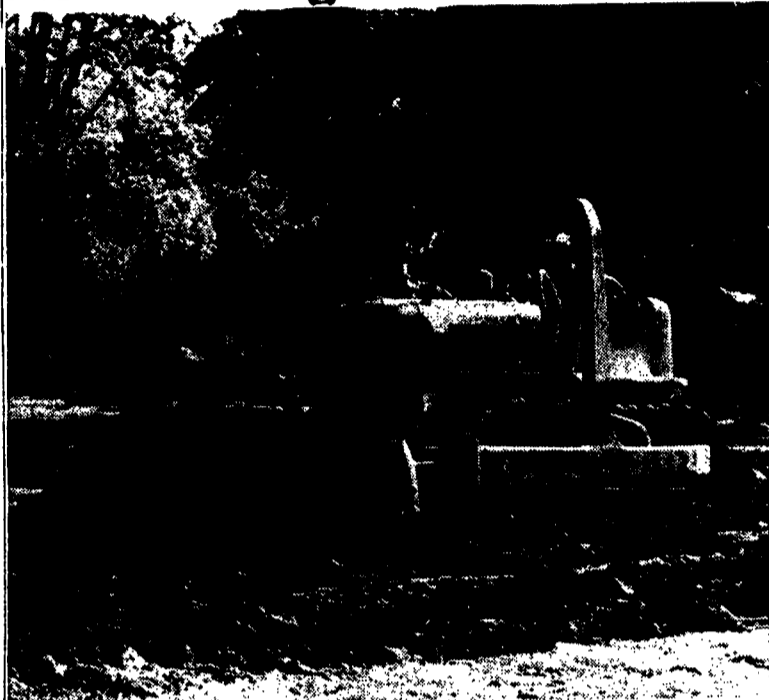

DENVER, Oct. 12 (AP)—President Eisenhower formally renewed today a bid to Russia to help dispel "fear and suspicion" by combining both his own and a Soviet plan for mutual checking on military installations and movements.

Eisenhower made the offer in a letter to Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin, signed yesterday, and delivered in Moscow today. The release of the letter at the Denver White House capped a day in which:

1. The President had lunch with Mrs. Eisenhower and his brother, Milton. The latter's name has figured in speculation over the Republican presidential nomination next year. But presiden-

EXCAVATION STARTS on the new $1,223,595 classroom building to be built between Osmond Laboratory and the University Hospital. A bulldozer and a dragline shovel yesterday were turning the first earth. Maple Cottage, which stands on the property, is being torn down to make way for the new building. When completed, it will contain 63 classrooms.

Workmen Begin Excavation For New Classroom Building

Excavation work has been started for the construction of the $1 million classroom building between Osmond Laboratory and the University Hospital.

The building, which will temporarily house the School of Business when completed, will eventually be converted into a general classroom building. It is to cost $1,223,595.

Workmen yesterday had almost dismantled Maple Cottage, which stands on the property. Only the chimney and two walls have yet to be torn down. A bulldozer and a dragline shovel have started the earthmoving job.

The building will have 63 classrooms. Its over-all structure will resemble a block letter C, with the open end toward Osmond.

The plans for the building include an innovation in movie projection rooms. In certain classrooms, two adjoining rooms will be divided by a movie projection room. A projector on swivels will cast the picture into either room. A closed-circuit television room will be put in one end of the building. The room will house an audience to witness the lecture. The talk also will be televised to students in other parts of the building.

The leg of the building connecting the two ends of the C will be four stories high. The one end will house an auditorium on each floor. Each auditorium will hold 126 students and will be equipped for movie projection.

The end of the C facing Pollock road will be three stories high and will contain offices for more than 110 faculty members. Twenty-one classrooms will be painted with murals, one for each nation in the Western hemisphere. They will be decorated in the style of the country the room will represent.

2 Tickets, Matric Card Are Needed

Students will be required to present three means of identification—the regulation Athletic Association ticketbook, the special football ticket distributed at registration, and matriculation card—to be admitted to Beaver Field Saturday.

The announcement was made yesterday by Harold R. Gilbert, assistant director of athletics.

The identification requirement is apparently the outcome of reports that students are selling their tickets at high prices.

Will Check at Gate
Gilbert said the identification must be shown as the students enter the stadium, not their assigned sections.

Ernest B. McCoy, dean of the College of Physical Education and Athletics, said Monday that the same procedure that applied for the opening game with Boston University will be in effect Saturday.

Students must sit in the section printed on the special tickets distributed at registration. They need not honor the row and seat numbers also printed on the tickets.

Entrance Requirement
Students are required to enter the stadium by the gate which leads to their assigned section.

Gilbert said that wives of students will have to present the regulation AA book and the special ticket for admittance. Married students were allowed to purchase student tickets for their wives.
