

Placement Service Cites Job Supply

There are approximately eight jobs awaiting the senior graduating in a technical field, and three job opportunities for the non-technical graduate, according to George Leetch, director of the University Placement Service.

Every year hundreds of companies from all parts of the United States come to the University campus looking for that the burden of the increased enrollment will not be distributed proportionally among the universities. It is expected that many independent liberal arts colleges will not want to expand their present facilities and enrollment.

Officials Face Decisions
Due to these enrollment problems, college officials are faced with two decisions: classroom and residence hall facilities will need to be increased, and strict limitations will need to be placed on the number of students to be admitted.

The founding of the Pennsylvania State University in 1855 began a new experiment in higher education. When Pennsylvania farmers began talking about an agricultural college, institutions of higher education were primarily concerned with developing learned men and members of such professions as the law, medicine, and ministry. The idea in developing the University was a school to train young men not only in practical agriculture, but also in science and literature.

1854 Bill Passed
A bill was passed in 1854 creating an institution called the Farmers' High School of Pennsylvania.

One of the great accomplishments in the early administrations was getting the school designated the land-grant college of the state. Evan Pugh, first president of the University, and several trustees, one a member of Congress, helped secure passage of the Morrill Act for allocation of portions of the public land to support colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts.

graduates. Last year approximately 20 to 30 per cent of the job offers were filled.

Graduates are demanded by companies such as life insurance, New York banks, Boy Scout organization, Y M C A, loan companies, and other colleges, such as the University of Berkeley and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Large Companies Come
Large companies such as Dow Chemical and Colgate Palmolive need liberal arts students as well as engineers. Merchandising, advertising, sales, finance and accounting are wide open, as well as chemistry, manufacturing, design, engineering and research development, Leetch said.

A large employer needs people with all types of background and interest, Leetch added. General Electric, for example, offers 10 training programs to graduates in all fields. These include engineering, manufacturing, chemical and metallurgical, atomic "test," apparatus sales, physics, business, and marketing.

"There are more requests for technical people because the companies that come from far away recruit their non-technical employees locally," Leetch explained.

Department stores—Joseph Horne and Kauffman's in Pittsburgh, and Wanamaker's and Strawbridge and Clothier in Philadelphia—also request many graduates.

Announcements Posted
Two weeks before the companies come to the campus to interview, announcements are posted on the bulletin boards of the colleges concerned and on the board in the lobby of Old Main. However, students in any college may be interviewed for any job,

14 Faculty Members Promoted

Status changes for 14 faculty and staff members have been approved by the University Board of Trustees.

Dr. J. W. Crane Remaley, associate professor of secondary education, was named associate professor of education. George M. Cunningham, part-time research associate, was named research associate in the department of engineering research.

Ag Changes
Changes in agricultural and home economics extension include Everell V. Chadwick, assistant county agricultural agent in Luzerne County, to become county agent, effective Nov. 1, in Luzerne County; and E. J. Dieffenbach, associate county agent in Schuylkill County, to become county agricultural agent in Susquehanna County, effective Oct. 1.

Mry Alice Gregory, assistant extension home economist in Berks County, has been named associate extension home economist, effective Oct. 1. Gloria Beppler, assistant extension home economist in Union County, has been named associate extension home economist, also effective Oct. 1.

Ceramics Changes
Changes in title reflecting the change from the department of ceramics to the department of ceramic technology have been approved for Dr. Wilhelm R. Buessem, professor; Dr. Megumi Tashiro, visiting professor; Floyd A. Hummel, associate professor; Dr. Guy Rindone and Dr. Malcolm C. McQuarrie, assistant professors; and Dr. Thomas E. Currie, Frank H. Gillery, Tormod Forland, and Dr. Sean A. Ahern, research associates.

as long as they have the qualifications, Leetch said.

Only approximately one-third of the employers looking for University graduates actually visit the campus. Information on these and the other two-thirds is on file at the Placement Service office at the rear of Old Main, and is available to all students.

And a dream-girl you've met...
Have a real cigarette—have a CAMEL!

—Man, that's pure pleasure!

It's a psychological fact:
Pleasure helps your disposition.

If you're a smoker, remember—more people get more pure pleasure from Camels than from any other cigarette!

No other cigarette is so rich-tasting, yet so mild!
