Cabinet Passes Three Suggestions Concerning Sponsoring of Parades

All-University Cabinet passed three suggestions concerning the holding of organized parades in State College at its meeting Thursday night.

The three points adopted into law provided for a new parade route, that no parades other than the Band Day parade during football season start prior to 6 p.m., and that no parades be held on Monday evenings.

The suggestions were part of a report read before Cabinet by Forrest Crawford, chairman of the Student Encampment Committee on Student Relationships to Town and the University, Joanne Caruso, chairman of the Committee on Student Organizations and their Functions, also presented a report by her committee.

Cabinet accepted both reports into the official minutes of the meeting, making a few minor changes and referring some sections to campus organizations.

The Student Relationships Committee urged the changing of parade procedure after consideration of a letter by Robert W. Edwards, borough manager, who brought up the question of student parades causing excessive traffic congestion.

The new parade route, as recommended by the committee, will begin "somewhere" on east campus, move on Shortlidge road to College avenue, west on College avenue to Burrowes street and onto campus.

Among the points accepted by Cabinet was a suggestion that Campus Patrol assist Borough police when University events heavily increase the traffic flow. Cabinet added a section to the report asking that campus patrolmen be placed at the corners of Locust lane, Shortlidge road, and Pugh street at College avenue during the "peek" hours of noon and 5 p.m. on school days.

Robert Bahrenburg, chairman of the Committee on Town Affairs and junior class president, said that his committee is investigating the traffic and parking problems, including the encouraging of student parking off the streets.

The "eternal" question of establishing a University book store, owned by students, was brought up in the report. The Association of Independent Men President Bruce Lieske pointed out a paragraph stating the committee feels that a book store is not needed if the faculty put out more accurate book lists earlier in the season and book stores cooperate more fully in ordering books and supplies.

Lieske moved that paragraph be deleted because he felt a book store acting as a coordinator between students and the University should be set up. Robert Smoot, former National Student Association coordinator on campus, spoke out against the motion, saying the whole section concerning the book store should be dropped as any more efforts by students in this direction might "break down everything that has been built up." He said, "We will get one but must wait." Cabinet then defeated Lieske's (Continued on page eight)
