Pitt Contest Suggestion Box Placed in HUB

A box for suggestions for a contest to be held next year with the University of Pittsburgh will be placed at the Hetzel Union desk today.

Members of the Student Centennial Committee will screen suggestions placed in the box and pick the most suitable.

Plans for the contest state that both the University and Pitt will hold contests separately. Thespians will sponsor the contest at the University and an organization at Pitt will be asked to run an identical contest on its campus.

Finalists of the two contests, according to present plans, will be judged at the Pitt game by impartial judges or an impartial judge.

Robert Heck, chairman of the Centennial Committee, said that ideas for the suggestion box should be designed so that all students would be able to take part in the contest.

He also said that students giving suggestions should try to get ideas that would not bring controversy between the two schools when a winner is picked.

Plans have not been presented to Pitt. Robert Krakoff, member of the Centennial Committee, said he felt it would be better to have the plans worked out in detail before presenting them to Pitt. When suggestions have been screened, a report will be given to All-University Cabinet.

East Dorms May Print Newspaper

Suggestions for a separate newspaper for the Nittany-Pollock area to be published either weekly or monthly were discussed last week at a meeting of Pollock Council.

Council president Robert Waltemeyer suggested that the publication be set up to focus more student attention on the Nittany and Pollock councils.

Council members pointed out that The Daily Collegian does a thorough job of covering the council meetings and activities, but does not have sufficient space to print everything the council feels should be published.

A similar venture for an area newspaper, undertaken by the Association of Independent Men several years ago, failed.

The possibility of financing the paper through treasury funds was also discussed. Several members of the council said they felt a newspaper without any outside advertising would be more beneficial toward the aims of the newspaper.

Waltemeyer appointed a committee to look into the matter. The committee will report on its findings at the next meeting of the council.

During the meeting, Waltemeyer recommended that a section of the next council meeting be set aside as a workshop to discuss area dormitory social functions and the role of the student in AIM.

Several council members also aired their disapproval of the All-University Cabinet ruling concerning formal dress at the Sunday noon meal in the Nittany dining rooms.

The council decided that Cabinet does not have the power to pass such a ruling since the problem is the concern of the Pollock area, and should be handled by the Pollock council. The matter was referred to the projects committee for further study.

The council also suggested that the annual council dance, slated for Dec. 10, be postponed until after the Christmas vacation. The scheduled date would interfere with the Military Ball weekend activities.

Contributions To Hibbs Fund Reach $190

Contributions to the Hibbs Memorial Fund have totaled $190, according to Helen Sittig, assistant dean of women and co-adviser to the Women's Student Government Association.

The deadline for contributing to the fund was Monday; however, Miss Sittig said she will receive late contributions if she is notified immediately. Contributions may be turned in to Miss Sittig in the dean of women's office, 105 Old Main.

WSGA, which will administer the fund, is setting up a committee composed of representatives of contributing groups and individual donors to select a project for use of the fund. This committee will meet Monday in 218 Hetzel Union to select a suitable project.

Approximately 19 groups and individuals donated to the fund, according to Carolyn Cunningham, WSGA president.

The fund was established to honor Mrs. Cordelia L. Hibbs, former assistant dean of women, who died Oct. 11, following a year-long illness.

Mrs. Hibbs' family requested that, instead of sending flowers, friends contribute toward a gift to the University in her memory.
