Blood Drive Will Open On Monday

Approximately 725 students have volunteered to give blood to the student blood drive which will open Monday in the Hetzel Union Building.

The headquarters for the three-day drive will be the card and television room in the HUB.

While response has been good, the committee in charge of the drive estimated that 200 walk-ins will be needed to meet the 900-pint goal, because some of the students who have volunteered to give blood will be rejected for physical reasons. Another cause for rejection may be age. Walk-ins must be 21 to donate blood.

A brief physical examination will be given each student before his blood will be accepted. Coagulation time of a blood sample will be checked as well as blood pressure, temperature, pulse and weight. The volunteer must weigh at least 100 pounds.

Donors are asked to eat lightly, avoiding starchy and fatty foods, before reporting to the bloodmobile in the HUB.

Orange juice, coffee, and doughnuts will be served by members of Kappa Kappa Gamma on Monday, Delta Delta Delta on Tuesday, and Alpha Omicron Pi and Kappa Delta on Wednesday.

Students under 21 who have not yet turned in their minor release forms must bring them to the bloodmobile when they give blood.

According to the schedule released by the committee, 225 students will give blood Monday, 280 on Tuesday, and 200 on Wednesday.

The drive is sponsored by the Red Cross campus unit in connection with the Johnstown Regional Blood Center.
