"Me for Milt" buttons and windshield stickers are popping up all over New York City.

Hy Gardner, nationally syndicated columnist for the New York Herald Tribune, wrote yesterday that the items pushing Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, president of the University, for the Republican presidential nomination were distributed

Ag Council OK's New Constitution

A revised constitution was approved by the Agriculture Student Council Tuesday night. Only two minor changes are embodied in the new constitution, revamped to clarify certain points in the two-year old one presently being used.

Election of members to the council was revised. Under the old constitution, all agriculture clubs that elected members to the council had to hold these elections by the second council meeting of the year, so clubs would be represented by the third council meeting.

There are 18 agriculture clubs that elect 51 representatives to the agriculture student council. Under the rules of the new constitution, no definite date has been specified for the various clubs to hold elections and send representatives to the council.

It is expected, however, that the clubs will elect members to the council by the fifth meeting of the year.

By-laws that were added from time to time to the old constitution have been placed in the body of the new constitution.

The constitution must be read and approved by the council at two successive meetings before it can go into effect.

Final plans for the Ag Hill Party, to be held from 5:45 p.m. to midnight in Recreation Hall, were completed at the meeting. Tickets will be sold at the booth in the Agriculture building or by Agriculture Club representatives. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Dorms to Hold Sunday Mixer

A mixed dinner will be held Sunday noon for all women in Thompson and McAllister Halls and one-third of the men in campus dormitories.

Seating charts will be posted on the dining hall bulletin boards. Women have been requested to wear regular Sunday dress and men to wear coats and ties.

The dinner was postponed from Oct. 9. It was planned to follow two mixed dinners held Sept. 25 and Oct. 2.

The dinners are sponsored by the Association of Independent Men and the Women's Student Government Association.

Donations to Hibbs Fund Reach $255

An additional late contribution has raised the Hibbs Memorial Fund total to $255, Miss Helen Sittig, assistant dean of women and co-adviser to Women's Student Government Association, said yesterday.

The Hibbs Fund gift committee voted Monday to use the fund to purchase a prayer desk for the meditation chapel of the Helen Eaken Eisenhower Memorial Chapel. This committee was composed of representatives of the individuals and groups which previously contributed to the fund.

without the consent and knowledge of Dr. Eisenhower.

The "Me for Milt" items are printed in red, white, and blue.

Last month a couple in Washington, D.C., Dr. and Mrs. Harold M. Dudley, formed a club to promote Dr. Eisenhower for the nomination. Dudley is executive secretary of the Greater Washington Industrial Council, and his wife is a former president of the Federation of Republican Women in Montgomery County, Md.

Meanwhile, Dr. Eisenhower has remained quiet on whether he wants or will accept the nomination.

He has been mentioned as a possible candidate by several syndicated columnists, including Hal Boyle, Roscoe Drummond, and Ed Koterba.

At least one newspaper, the Waynesboro Record Herald, has editorially come out in support of Dr. Eisenhower for the nomination. A farm journal editorially supported him as early as last summer.

National magazines, including the Saturday Evening Post and American Magazine, have published articles on Dr. Eisenhower within the last several months.

Dr. Eisenhower has been called one of his brother's most trusted advisers. President Eisenhower has called him "the bright one in the family."

Players Handbook Copies Available

Members of Players may pick up copies of the Players Handbook in the Department of Dramatics office in Schwab Auditorium.

Persons interested in becoming members of Players may read a copy of the handbook in the dramatics office.

The handbook was compiled last spring by Deborah Peek, past president of Players, various senior managers, and Ray Vanderbilt, advertising adviser of Players, under the direction of Dr. Walter H. Walters, Players adviser last year.

It explains the exact duties of the crew heads, crew members, and the senior managers in addition to giving the point system used in determining membership.

Film Shows To Continue At Osmond

The Sunday movie program on campus will continue for at least three weeks, Richard Rigling, chairman of the student films committee, announced yesterday.

The showing of movies Sunday nights in 119 Osmond beyond this date will depend on student support and any action taken on a number of projects under consideration, Rigling said.

Projected ideas include the showing of movies in Schwab Auditorium and the showing of foreign and classical films.

On Tuesday, State College approved the showing of movies Sundays after 2 p.m. However, movies will not be shown on Sundays for approximately three or four weeks, Robert G. Neilson, manager of two of the three local theaters, has said.

Sunday showings will be delayed, Neilson said, because of the legal procedures that must be followed after approval of the Sunday movie referendum.

The official count of Tuesday's general election ballots is scheduled to begin at noon today, with the movie votes to be counted along with the other borough and county returns.

Judge Ivan Walker, who will be in charge of the count, said he could not predict when the official figures will be released.

W.Va. Students Practice Artistry On Pitt Campus

Eleven University of West Virginia students, dissatisfied with the present hue of the University of Pittsburgh campus, tried to rectify matters Tuesday.

They painted Pitt's campus, and, according to the Associated Press, ended up in the hoosegow.

The students' artistic endeavors were interrupted early yesterday morning when the night superintendent spotted the skullduggery and called the police.

The students were jugged, but a call from Capt. Tom Hamilton, Pitt's athletic director, freed the students.

Hamilton said since Pitt meets West Virginia University Saturday on the gridiron, such goings on are natural.

Pitt meets the University Nov. 19 at Beaver Field.

SIX McALLISTER COEDS gather around the snow-woman they built on the lawn of Old Main last night. They are Dale Lang, Barbara Kreider, Rachel Neff, Kay Kegel, Anne Coldesser and Margaret MacColl. The snow-woman is named Ora, according to the girls. It was one of several snowmen which sprung up last night as a result of the three-inch snowfall.

Season's First Snow Results In Accidents, Slippery Roads

By PAT EVANS

The season's first heavy snowfall—totaling approximately three inches—fell last night resulting in slippery roads and several accidents in the area. However no students were involved.

The Campus Patrol reported all was quiet on campus.

Both state and borough police reported hazardous driving conditions. State police issued a warning asking motorists not to travel except for necessary trips.

Tomorrow May Be Warmer

But for students expecting to go home this weekend, weather conditions are expected to ease by today. The snow is expected to turn to rain early this morning and today is predicted to be cloudy and warm with possible showers, according to students in the department of meteorology.

The low temperature today was 20 degrees, the high 41.
