

AIM Board Urges Probation for Three In Drinking Cases

The Association of Independent Men's Judicial Board of Review last night recommended to the dean of men's office that a sophomore from the Pollock area be put on office and judicial probation, and that two freshmen from the Nittany area be put on office probation.

In the first case, the counselor found a nearly empty pint and a nearly full fifth of whiskey in the student's room on the morning of Nov. 6.

The student said that he had invited three friends from Philadelphia here for the Syracuse game, and that they brought the pint with them. Most of this, he added, was drunk at the game. He also said that he and one of the friends later that day went to Bellefonte where they purchased the fifth. He denied buying the whiskey, saying that his friend made the actual purchase. However, he admitted drinking some of the whiskey.

The student was not inebriated and is legally allowed to drink. Although he said he did not know exactly how the fifth was found in his room early the next morning by the counselor, he freely admitted being responsible for the actions of his guests.

The second case also involved a drinking incident. Two freshmen had been drinking at a downtown bar and after being inebriated they returned to the dormitory. There they exhibited disorderly conduct in the form of loud singing and shouting. The students denied that any of the other students in the dorm had any special objections to their actions, and said that none of them complained about being disturbed.

The students also said that they had not been specifically exposed to the University regulations on drinking in the dormitories and the possession of alcoholic beverages on campus. Some controversy also arose in this case about whether or not students should be merely warned the first time they violate these drinking regulations. The two students said that they were under the impression that this would be the case in their incident.

Board probation puts the student under the surveillance of the dean of men's office. This subjects them to periodic calls by that office for consultation. The length of the probation is set by the dean's office.

Judicial probation means that the judicial board may call the student in to attend a meeting as they see fit. The student is not compelled to attend the weekly meetings of the board.

West Rejects Soviet Security Pact

GENEVA, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Western Allies turned down European security pact based tonight a new Soviet bid for a European security pact based on the continued division of Germany.

They also rejected a draft declaration by Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov which would commit the Big Four powers to consider the disarmament problem in the future with emphasis on the Russian objective of banning atomic weapons.

Molotov's repeated efforts to divorce European security from German unity got a chilly Western reception.

"As long as Mr. Molotov persists in his refusal to agree to discuss German reunification by

Simes Issues Warning On Destruction at Pitt

Statement Made After Painting Of Pitt Campus

Students who take part in any action involving the destruction of property on the University of Pittsburgh campus this week will be subject to disciplinary action, Dean of Men Frank J. Simes said yesterday.

Simes made this announcement after receiving word from Theodore Biddle, dean of men at Pitt, that the Pitt campus had been painted Monday night.

Biddle said that the words, "Penn State beat Pitt," had been painted in blue paint in several places along the sidewalk outside the Cathedral of Learning, the main building on the Pitt campus.

Black Enamel Used
The same inscription was painted on the building at three entrances. These were painted in black enamel.

Simes said that Biddle was not sure whether or not students from the University were responsible for the damage to the Pitt campus. Simes added, however, that the evidence seemed to show pretty conclusively that University students were involved.

Another regrettable side to the incident, according to Simes, was the fact that now that University students apparently have made the first move, students from Pitt will feel justified in retaliating by defacing some of the University campus.

Could Lead to Serious Trouble
Things of this nature, Simes said, often lead to a chain reaction of events which may end in serious trouble on either campus.

Monday night Interfraternity Council voted to have member houses guard the Lion Shrine at the suggestion of the dean of men's office. That office received a phone call from the dean of men's office at Pitt stating that the Lion Shrine should be guarded since Pitt students had painted the University of West Virginia campus last week.

Fraternity Theft Stumps Police

Borough police investigating a Sunday morning robbery of foodstuffs at Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity have not found any new evidence, patrolman Ralph M. Farmer said last night.

Previously, police had found three fingerprints on a ground-level basement window through which the burglar is believed to have entered the house. Police have been unable to check the fingerprints, Farmer said.

Police Check Cards At Town House

Borough police made a spot check for minors at the Town House about 9:15 p.m. last night.

Police said a faculty member had complained that minors were being served alcoholic beverages there. No minors were taken into custody, according to police.

However, George Homich, manager of the Town House, said one patron was requested to leave because he was unable to prove his age.

Police said no other checks were made.

University Seeks Identification Of C. V. Cummer

Who is C. V. Cummer?

This is the question asked by students who have posters signed with this name tacked to numerous trees on campus.

Most of the signs can be read in sequence, similar to the roadside signs advertising a shaving cream familiar to motorists. Others simply ask, "Who is C. V. Cummer?"

Students are not the only persons inquiring about Mr. Cummer. It seems that tacking posters on campus trees is prohibited by a University regulation.

So Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs, has asked the Campus Patrol to look for Mr. Cummer. And Walter W. Trainer, landscape supervisor, has instructed his men to take down the signs.

If Mr. Cummer wants his apparent fame to continue, he'll have to put up more signs. If he puts up more signs, he may get caught by the Campus Patrol. So we may soon know who is C. V. Cummer.

Jar of Paint Found Hidden Behind Lion

A quart jar of olivedrab paint was found behind a tree approximately 100 feet to the rear of the Nittany Lion statue at 7:30 p.m. last night by members of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity, who were guarding the monument at the time.

According to the group watching the Lion, a lone man dressed in khaki pants and a dark coat was seen walking through the woods behind the statue while the fraternity guards were having their picture taken standing watch over the statue.

A detachment was sent out to scour the woods and adjoining parking lots in search of the man, thought to be a student from the University of Pittsburgh, but to no avail.

Upon returning to their post after a thorough search, the students found the jar of paint in its hiding place behind a tree which the intruder had passed.

The group reported no attempts were made to paint the lion.

Pitt Poster Competition Is Canceled

A poster contest sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, which was planned for Saturday before the Pitt game has been canceled.

Douglas Moorhead, a member of Alpha Phi Omega, requested permission for the contest from Ernest B. McCoy, dean of the College of Physical Education and Athletics, and was refused by McCoy for several reasons.

Against University Policy
McCoy said a poster contest held at Beaver Field prior to a game is against general University policy. He gave as another reason the fact that there would be enough confusion at Beaver Field Saturday without the added confusion of a poster contest. McCoy also said that after the contest there would be no adequate place to put the posters and they might be strewn around the stadium and field.

Alpha Phi Omega originally planned to hold the contest to improve and increase the Penn State-Pitt tradition. The contest was to be open to any group on campus.

To Be General Contest
William Stiffler, chairman of the committee on the poster contest, said the contest was to be a general poster contest with little regard to size or content.

Stiffler said the planned theme for the contest was the Pitt-Penn State rivalry and the Centennial year. He said the entries were to be divided into two categories: comic and general following of the theme.

Two Prizes Would Be Given
According to the plans, two prizes would be given for each of the two categories—first and second prizes with a cup or plaque or the money equivalent for each prize. Groups could get the money equivalent so that dormitory groups would be able to divide the prize if they entered and won.

Stiffler said the group is not planning another event to take the place of the poster contest.

Campus Ban Set On P.A. Systems

The use of public address systems on campus has been prohibited by the Senate Committee on Student Affairs.

Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs and secretary of the committee, said yesterday the ban, which is effective during all hours, applies to all organizations and individuals.

Formerly, public address systems could be used during non-class hours.

Kenworthy said violators of the ban could be penalized by the appropriate disciplinary bodies.

The ban was requested by All-University Cabinet.
