Pitt Batters Lions 20-0 in Snow

By ROY WILLIAMS

For Penn State it was an "old" story Saturday when it ended its 1955 Centennial season on a disheartening note with a 20-0 whitewash at the hands of self-assured Pitt.

The field was wet, the fans were wet—this time by a game-long snowstorm instead of rain—and the opposition was bigger. This was nothing new for the Lion gridders or their fans.

Pitt wielded a big stick—its biggest in three years, and finally took the game even though it was favored. In the last three games of the rivalry this was impossible for the Panthers although they enjoyed the favorites role each time.

Pitt, in slapping the first shut-out on the Lions since Wisconsin did it in the 1953 opener, 26 games ago, did it decisively.

With quarterback Pete Neft, a relative newcomer, calling as perfect a game as the weather would permit him to, Pitt used its back-field power that gave the Lions a sound thrashing on the ground. With Lou Cimarolli, Neft, and Dick Bowen carrying the brunt of the ground attack, Neft didn't rely on his passing game. When he did pass, however, he hit on four of four.

Pitt capitalized on the breaks, while Penn State couldn't. In the first period, Bowen fumbled on the Lion 33. Clint Law, tackle, recovered, but 12 minutes later Pitt intercepted on its own 18. Penn State's second break came in the third quarter when a high center went over Jenkin's head as he stood in the punting slot. Penn State, picking up first one and then two yards, lost four on the third down, and lost the ball on an incomplete fourth-down pass.

In the same period, after Pitt had taken a 14-0 lead, the Lions marched to Pitt's nine, but missed by a foot on a fourth and one-foot situation. In the final stanza, with Penn State trying desperately to avert a shutout, a lateral from fullback Emil Caprara to Lenny Moore was fumbled and Pitt recovered on its own 33. So ended the Lions' breaks for 1955.

Pitt, on the other hand, took advantage of a second-quarter (Continued on page seven)

We razor's have life pretty soft. All we do is wait to be picked up and applied to the right place. But once in a while we get a guy who thinks he has bamboo on his head. Honestly fellows, your hair isn't supposed to grow 6 feet tall. Get it cut more often and give us poor razors a break.
