

FMA Acts to Secure Members More Discount

The Fraternity Marketing Association board of trustees has revised its system of inviting bids to try to secure bigger discounts for member houses.

The board decided Monday night that spring semester bids would be accepted from food vendors only if the vendors promised to give bigger discounts to FMA members than those given to non-member houses.

Previously, food vendors dealing with FMA had given the fraternity buying agent the same discount as they were giving to non-member houses. After FMA subtracted its 1/2 per cent service charge, non-member houses were receiving larger discounts than FMA members.

Bids to Be Restrictive
The bids, which will be sent to vendors sometime next week, will specify that the vendor must give FMA enough discount so that members will be receiving 1/2 per cent larger discount than non-member houses after the service charge is subtracted.

Harold W. Perkins, assistant dean of men and president of the FMA board of trustees, said yesterday that FMA was not trying to stop vendors from dealing with non-member houses. The board of trustees, he said, is merely trying to give FMA members a fair deal.

Progress Report Heard
The board also heard a progress report which showed there was a 21 per cent increase in total volume so far this year. As of Dec. 1 last year, the report said, total sales were $33,500. The report listed total sales as of Dec. 1 this year as $40,600.

The board officially accepted Delta Tau Delta and Pi Lambda Phi petitions for membership. Alpha Sigma Phi's withdrawal was also approved. The new members bring FMA membership to 28. There were 21 participating members at the beginning of the year.

Small Amount of Fines Levied by Traffic Court
Traffic Court Monday night dealt out the least amount of fines of the semester to student traffic violators.

Six students appeared before the nine-member board. Charges against one were dismissed, and two fines were suspended. Students receiving suspended fines are not required to pay the court as long as they are not involved in a second offense. Gene Wethers, senior in arts and letters from Philadelphia and court chairman, said.

Three students were fined $6. These fines involved parking violations and failure to report to campus patrol.

Correction
Richard Brandt for Sigma Phi Alpha was one of the five finalists in the pushcart race Saturday instead of Richard Brown as previously reported in the Daily Collegian.

Figurines Missing, Door Swag Stolen In Campus Thefts

Two campus thefts, one of monetary and another of sentimental value, are still unsolved.

Fourteen figurines valued at $1000 are still missing from their glass case in the Mineral Industries gallery, Dr. John D. Ridge, professor and head of the department of mineral economics, said yesterday. A $100 reward is offered for information leading to the recovery.

The figurines, which range in size from one to four inches, were taken on July 13. Two of the figurines missing are a fantail fish and an Oriental God.

The door swag on the front door of Simmons was taken sometime after 8:30 p.m. Saturday, according to Mrs. Hazel Keen, Simmons housemother.

The decorations included pine branches and eight silver bells.
