4 Groups Celebrate Chanukah

Two fraternities and two sororities will observe Chanukah, the Hebrew Feast of Lights, with individual services of programs.

The festival is being held today through Friday, according to the standard calendar.

Phi Sigma Delta fraternity held a candle-lighting service and gift exchanging at a ceremony last night. The brothers will continue the candle-lighting tradition every night until the end of the festival.

A joint Chanukah and Christmas party was held last night by Pi Lambda Phi fraternity.

Phi Sigma Sigma and Alpha Epsilon Phi sororities will also hold candle-lighting ceremonies throughout the festival.

Chanukah commemorates the victory of Israel in the first recorded battle for religious liberty.

During the Feast candles are lit for eight successive evenings. One candle is lit the first evening, two the second, and so on until all eight are kindled.

An additional candle, called the shammos, is lit at the same time to be used to light the other tapers.

Chanukah is also marked by the exchanging of gifts and traditional blessings, songs, and hymns.

Senate Unit Sets Rule On Parties

Student organizations planning to sponsor social events open to all students will have to clear the date with the Senate subcommittee on social affairs, it was announced yesterday.

The purpose of the new policy, which has been passed by the Senate Committee on Student Affairs, will be to coordinate social activities on a master calendar to eliminate conflicting affairs.

The subcommittee will set up a master calendar of future student events, and organizations desiring to hold an open event will have to coordinate the date with the master calendar, according to Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs.

Chairman of the subcommittee, who will handle the requests, is O. Edward Pollock, assistant to the dean of men.

Formerly, only conferences and conventions had to be cleared with the administration. The Hetzel Union desk kept an activities calendar, but organizations were not required to check with it.

This resulted in organizations holding competing events on the same date, Kenworthy said.

Kenworthy also announced that fraternities planning to hold Christmas parties for children will be permitted to extend the time limit to 9 p.m.
