

Dress Rule Favored By West Halls 13-2

West Halls Council last night voted 13-2 in favor of a dining dress rule similar to the one declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court last week.

The council had previously favored the ruling by 14-1. However, one member changed his vote when he learned that the ruling would prevent West Halls men from removing their coats while eating.

Discussion followed the vote on whether an amendment allowing men to do so should be added to the dress rule as formerly proposed.

Daniel Thalmer, freshman in chemical engineering from Pittsburgh, said an amendment allowing men to remove their coats while eating would defeat the purpose of the entire ruling.

David Faust, council secretary, suggested that the rule, if passed as proposed, would set a standard for future West Halls residents, and in the future would not be questioned.

Paul Reber, senior in horticulture from Towanda, was appointed chairman of the Christmas decorating contest committee replacing Thalmer, who resigned.

Council will award prizes of $15, $10, and $5 for best decorated residence hall units. Units will be judged by a committee of students and faculty members 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 17.

In a report by housing committee chairman, William Eisenberg, he stated that several changes will be made in Waring Hall during the Christmas recess.

The display window behind the information desk will be reversed to face toward the courtyard entrance, and the information desk will be replaced by an information window.

The bulletin board will be relocated along the wall opposite the post office windows.

NSA—

(Continued from page two) don NSA that the purpose of having NSA is not to see how much the University can get out of it, but to extend the University's influence to colleges and universities all over the country and to contribute to organized nationwide student opinion.

NSA discussion has appeared again this fall as Cabinet is considering a proposal to join the organization again.

Norman Miller, acting chairman of the Board of Publications, in a Daily Collegian editorial said "The ideas brought back to the University delegates to the national convention were never adequately disseminated to the student body. This fact is demonstrated by the almost total unconcern with NSA and unawareness of its existence on the part of the majority of the student body."

Miller also said that NSA has been connected in the past with many radical viewpoints.

During a Cabinet discussion on NSA Robert Bahrenburg, junior class president, said that students should know about things away from the University and will find out about them through NSA.

Several other Cabinet members came out in favor of NSA at that time. They all expressed ideas about what NSA could do for the University and what it could do for NSA.

Ray Farabee, a vice president of NSA, while visiting the University this fall, told Cabinet members that NSA has no lobbying power.

It was through his uncle and his father, a former pro fighter, that young Yarosz obtained an interest in the fight game.

Yarosz—going to school on a boxing scholarship—hopes to do a little amateur fighting after graduating. "It'll probably be while I'm in the Army," the All-quippa native said, realizing that two years in the service await him.

This year's IM boxing tournament was a success, and made even more so by the competent handling of each fighter by two men who were willing to spend much of their spare time teaching the boys how it should be done.

In the final bout of the evening—the one the crowd had been waiting for—Steve Haky, Sigma Nu, decisively rugged Sam Valentine, Sigma Phi Epsilon, for the unlimited championship.

Haky knocked Valentine down in the final round with a sharp right to the head to clinch the bout. Although the SPE was up immediately, it was a clear knockdown, the decisive blow in the fight. Haky, boxing with the boxing finesse of a pro, counter-punched his way to victory as he sidestepped the lunging Valentine to score with both hands.

The hard-punching Valentine cornered Haky several times, but the Sigma Nu moved in to a clinch and escaped further danger.
