Art

Art Exhibition Tour Will Begin Jan. 1

The Centennial art exhibition, "Pennsylvania Painters," will begin its nationwide tour on Jan. 1 at the Toledo Museum in Art in Toledo, Ohio.

The collection, which was displayed at the University Oct. 8 to Nov. 6, was the first major loan exhibition ever brought to the campus and the first ever held on Pennsylvania painting.

During the exhibition, more than 10,000 persons saw the 48 paintings which represented the work of 46 Pennsylvania artists.

The display, valued at more than a quarter million dollars, was obtained from 35 lenders, including museums and private collectors ranging geographically from Maine to Missouri. Three of the pictures, "Walt Whitman" by Thomas Eakins, "Shipwreck" by Thomas Birch, and "A Closet Door" by John F. Peto, were flown to the University from European showings by the United States Information Agency.

"Shipwrecked" Included

Of these three, only "Shipwrecked" will be included in the nationwide tour. The others were withdrawn because of the dangers which might occur in traveling.

Due to other withdrawals, substitutions have been made so that only 26 of the originally exhibited paintings are on tour.

The paintings, which represent the work of Pennsylvania artists from the early 18th to the early 20th centuries, exclude the work of living artists.

Dickson Collected

The collection was assembled as a part of the Centennial program at the University by a committee headed by Dr. Harold E. Dickson, professor of fine arts, and was selected for a nationwide tour by the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C.

The booklet, written in conjunction with the exhibition and published by the University, will be on sale in the cities where the collection is shown, and is available at the Pattee Library. Price of the booklet is $1. The library will mail it anywhere in the United States postpaid.

Faculty Luncheon Club

Mrs. Willa C. Taylor, professor of music education, will address the Faculty Luncheon Club at noon Monday in the Hetzel Union Building.

Mrs. Taylor will speak on "Music for Christmas."

Speech

Aspaturian Cites Bi-Party Agreement

By ANNE FRIEDBERG

Republicans and Democrats both agree on the basic elements of foreign policy, according to Dr. Vernon V. Aspaturian, professor of political science.

In a speech on "Foreign Policy in the 1956 Presidential Election" before the Young Democrats Club Thursday night, Aspaturian said that beyond this basic agreement is a wide range of disagreement. A single abiding interest of all Americans is the destiny of the American nation in the "jungle of foreign politics."

The United States Constitution, emphasized the speaker, gives sole responsibility and power for the conducting of foreign relations to the President. Only he can assume responsibility, but he may give some of his powers to a deputy, namely the Secretary of State, Aspaturian added. If catastrophes or diplomatic failures arise, however, the President must assume ultimate responsibility.

Chinese Calamity

Dr. Aspaturian said he believed the triumph of Communism in China to be the greatest diplomatic calamity in the history of the American nation.

"The party in power has the right to defend foreign policy and criticize past policies of previous administrations if the criticism is restrained to incompetence and not misconduct," Dr. Aspaturian pointed out.

He added that it is legitimate for the opposition party to attack the ability of those who carry out foreign policy.

Policy is Unique

"Foreign policy, unlike domestic policy, is unique," said Dr. Aspaturian.

Debate on foreign policy affects three important groups abroad. The groups, as stated by Dr. Aspaturian, include our allies, who listen to various candidates on the subject; uncommitted powers, who may make choices on the basis of campaign oratory; and the Russians, our antagonists, who may plan strategy according to campaign platforms.

Dr. Aspaturian told the group that all factions in the Democratic party, regardless of their differences, are uniform on the foreign policy issue, and no perceptible deviation from party policies has arisen. If it were not for the President, a Republican fog in regards to foreign policy would result due to the opposition or right-wing Republicans who also tried the same tactics in the Truman administration, Dr. Aspaturian said.

Outside Constitution

Bipartisanship and non-partisanship, he said, cannot be legal and must be informal, because it is outside the judicial framework of the Constitution.

A non-partisanship program involves consultation in all stages with leading and prominent figures of the opposition party, the speaker said.

In speaking of present foreign policy, Dr. Aspaturian judged it to be on an "even keel," and pointed out that a continued majority of both parties were in favor of it.

Music

Two Christmas Songfests Set For Monday

Two annual Christmas Sings will be held Monday night.

The All-University Carol Sing, which will begin at 9 p.m. on the steps of Old Main, is sponsored jointly by the University Christian Association, the department of music, and the Chapel Choir.

The annual German Christmas Sing, sponsored by the Department of German, will be given at 7:45 p.m. in Schwab.

Fishburn to Direct

Dr. Hummel Fishburn, head of the department of music, will conduct the All-University Carol Sing, and Willa C. Taylor, director of the chapel choir, will lead the choir.

The Rev. Luther H. Harshbarger, University chaplain, will give a short message of Christmas greeting.

Wurfl to Read

Ah the German Christmas Sing, George J. Wurfl, professor emeritus of German, will read the Nativity in German followed by a talk in English by Dr. Robert E. Dengler, professor emeritus of Greek.

The audience will participate in the singing of three well known German Christmas carols. George E. Ceiga, University organist, will play the prelude and the postlude; also included will be violin and piano selections.

Juniors Will Entertain 300 Faculty Children

Approximately 300 faculty children will be entertained by the Junior Class from 2 to 5 p.m. today in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

The Christmas party will include two movies, games, and refreshments. Philip Wein, ventriloquist, and Robert Little, magician, will perform.

Leonides Theme Song Competition Will End Jan. 6

Applications for the Leonides theme song contest will be available from Monday until the contest closes at 5:30 p.m. Jan. 6. No entries will be accepted after that time.

The songs will be judged by a 4-member panel at a special meeting on Jan. 6. Originality of words, appropriateness of the tune chosen, and the praise given to Leonides, the University, and the campus as a whole will be the prime considerations in selecting the winning composition.

Original words may be set to classical, semi-classical, or popular tune, or original words and music may be submitted.

A $10 prize will be awarded for the winning composition. The AIM-Leonides chorus will use the song as their theme.
