

Christmas Comes To Penn State

Gail Lundgren (left) and Rita Chase, both juniors, get last minute gifts last night before leaving for vacation.

Though Dec. 25 is still a few days away, the Christmas spirit has been in evidence at the University for several weeks.

There have been Christmas parties, carol sings, Christmas decoration contests, and throngs of shoppers in downtown stores.

On this page are recorded some of the yule activities which have brought the Christmas spirit to Penn State . . . that same spirit that nineteen hundred and fifty-five years ago sang "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

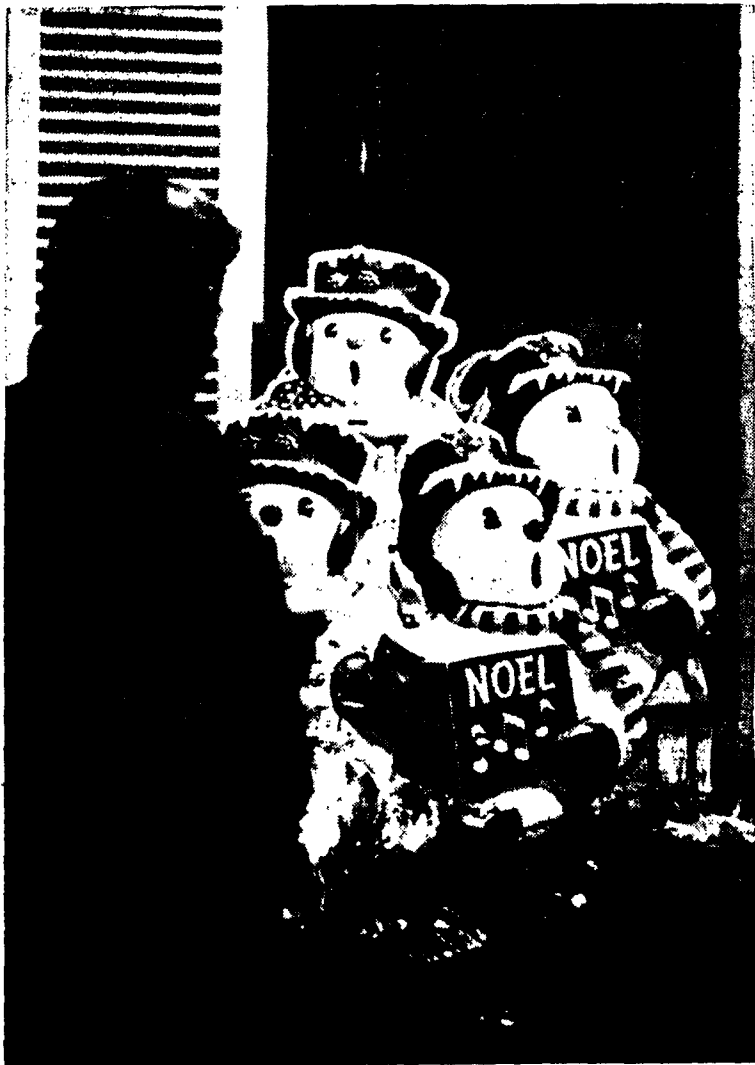

Daily Collegian Photofeature
by Ron Walker, Dave Bavar, and Joe Rohrbaugh

Part of Nittany Dorm 39 winning window display.

Chapel choir presents annual Christmas candlelight service Saturday night in Schwab Auditorium.

Downtown windows come to life in Christmas displays. This one is from the Chamber of Commerce window.

Every Christmas party has its Santa Claus, and this time the Alpha Epsilon Pi's put on a real show for the local underprivileged children.