

Watkins Explains Woes Of University Scheduling

By AL KLIMCKE

Think you have too many eight o'clocks, four o'clocks or Saturday classes? How about a few final examination conflicts?

Well, just relax, and gobble a few more aspirin tablets. Because these troubles are here to stay, according to scheduling officer Ray V. Watkins.

27 Selected For Freshman Advisory Board

Twenty-seven students have been selected from 61 applicants for the first Freshman Advisory Board by the freshman class officers.

Women chosen are Lillian Cordero, Dolores Dodson, Patricia Evans, Sandra Gusky, Nancy Hankins, Barbara Hill, Janet Ours, Carol Tuckerman, and Mary Lynn Ward.

Men are John Aber, Robert Averill, Ronald Blasius, Alvin Clemens, Richard Friedman, Edward Hintz, Dale Hoy, George Huggler, John Hussey, Frederick L. Kerr, Louis Lasday, Herbert Levin, Juri Niler, Samuel Parsons, John Rapchak, Louis Savadove, Daniel Thalimer, and Walter Walsh.

The Freshman Advisory Board will be in operation for the first time this year, and will organize the Freshman class dance to be held Feb. 25, according to Moyer.

The dance committees will be selected at the first meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday in 218 Hetzel Union.

Recent Poll--

(Continued from page one) lieves there are many benefits to be gained, but she added that it needs more work.

Joel Steen expressed the opinion that through joining Penn State would have a better knowledge of what goes on at other campuses and be able to get ideas from them.

Albert Leffler said he worked with a panel on NSA at the University of Pittsburgh while working on the newspaper there and that he is opposed to joining NSA. He feels that NSA has a dubious background and has been linked with communism. He also said that NSA has very few great universities on its list.

Mary Cabeen thinks that NSA can do Penn State a lot of good in that the students will know more about world affairs and that the University will be joining up with other schools.

Constance Weitknecht said she is in favor of joining because NSA has given Penn State valuable information.

Illegally Parked Cars To Be Tagged by Police

Borough police will continue to tag all cars parked in the 500 block of S. Frazier street, according to Chief John R. Juba.

His reminder that the 500 block is posted for no parking was announced after the police again issued a series of parking tickets.

Pizza Delivered; Truck Disappears In Nittany Area

The driver of a pizza delivery truck was working at his job a few minutes after midnight on Sunday. He parked in the vicinity of Nittany Dorm 42, raced inside to make a delivery and then raced out.

But there wasn't a truck in sight.

Yesterday State College Borough police, campus patrol and State Police were alerted for the truck belonging to the Home Delivery Pizza, 129 S. Pugh street.

"I'm offering a $25 reward," said Frank DeFluri, senior in business administration from Boalsburg and owner of the Home Delivery, "for knowledge that leads to the return of the truck."

He is now operating with only two of his four truck. Another is out of commission.

Watkins said these student headaches, along with a few of his own, such as how to make available rooms in which some 14,000 students can be educated, are all due to the steady increase in enrollment at the University.

With tongue in cheek, he termed them, "collegiate growing pains."

Process Described

Scheduling officer since 1935, when, he said, he began scheduling classes for around 3000 students, Watkins described the intricate process by which the University's schedule of classes is made up and its timetable prepared.

The wheels begin turning for a new semester's schedule, he said, when a set of "course offering request" cards are sent to the head of each department.

The cards request such information as, number of hours of lecture, recitation and practicum which will be required by each course, number of sections which will have to be scheduled, length of periods desired and, number and type of rooms desired.

Numbers Requested

Also requested is the number of students in each curriculum who will be required to take the course along with their semester standing, and the approximate number of students which the department head expects to elect the course.

A card is filled out for each course which is to appear in the timetable, and these are returned to the scheduling office.

"This is my bible," Watkins said holding up a copy of the University catalogue. "I have to make every course available just as it is listed in the catalogue."

Watkins termed the catalogue "a contract between the University and the student." He said each student must be able to schedule his courses as they are listed there. Therefore, no two courses listed for the same curriculum and semester can conflict in their hours.

"Further Complications"

Further complicating matters, Watkins said, are 258 courses with multiple sections. These are courses in which all the sections do not meet at the same time. These, too, must be kept from conflicting.

Watkins listed as another complication the fact that ROTC sections must be made available for such a large percentage of the student body. He said it becomes increasingly difficult to keep many sections of a single course from conflicting with themselves, as well as with other courses which a student is required to take.

"The number of classrooms available has not increased in proportion with the increase in enrollment," Watkins said. This makes sections larger and scheduling more intricate, he said.

LA Council Approves Revision

The Liberal Arts Student Council last night approved a revised constitution.

Most of the revisions were purely mechanical including requirement switch-overs to the new grading system, a change in the freshman representation on council from four to six and a clarification of the position of odd semester students who wish to run for membership on council.

Richard Schriger, chairman of the constitutional revisions committee, read the constitution as amended for the second consecutive week. Approval by the council by the newly revised constitution into effect.

George Buckhout, council vice-president, reported that the monthly coffee hour held at Beta Theta Pi on Tuesday afternoons have been successful. Buckhout stated that each freshman has been invited to one coffee hour. He reported that a command performance of faculty and interested freshmen at a coffee hour is in the planning stage.

Louis Adler, council president, brought it to the attention of council that the liberal arts literary magazine, The Lantern, will be sold during the first week of the spring semester.
