

Racial Progress Made, Panel Says

By JIM KOPP

A four man panel discussing racial segregation at a meeting of the Sociology Club last night came to the conclusion that there has been much progress in the field of race relations.

But they emphasized there is still a long way to go, citing instances of discrimination in the immediate area and the country at large.

Drama

Players Set Tryout Dates For '13 Clocks'

Tryouts for the Players' production of "The Thirteen Clocks" will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday and Monday in the Little Theater in the basement of Old Main.

Parts are available for 12 men and five women. Some of the roles require singing and dancing. Tryouts are open to students with a 2.0 All-University average, to faculty and staff members, and to townspeople.

Persons interested in becoming members of the advertising, construction, costume, lights, sound, make-up or property crews should give their name, address, and phone number to the division of dramatics secretary, extension 684.

The play will be presented March 8, 9, and 10 in Schwab Auditorium. There will also be a matinee for children. The date for the matinee has not been decided.

Cameron D. Iseman, instructor in dramatics, adapted "The Thirteen Clocks" from a book by James Thurber for his master of art's thesis in 1953. For the March production Iseman and Robert Reifsnider, director of the play, are writing some original words and music.

"The Thirteen Clocks" is a fantasy which will include some incidental songs and dances.

8 Sophomore Men Tapped

Eight men were tapped by Delphi, sophomore-men's hat society, last night.

Those tapped were Harry S. Brown, business administration major from Pittsburgh; John Collier, chemical engineering major from Brockport, N.Y.; David Faust, education major from Barnesville; Peter Fishburn, industrial engineering major from State College; Thomas Hollander, arts and letters major from Monessen; Edward Long, arts and letters major from Qananie; Robert Nurock, arts and letters major from Elkins Park; and Per Torgerson, electrical engineering major from Long Island, N.Y.

These men were chosen for their outstanding participation in dramatics and forensics, student government, athletics, publications, and other activities. The primary emphasis was put on their accomplishments as freshmen.

Debate

Four Teams To Attend Tournament

Four teams will represent the University at the Bucknell Debate Tournament at Lewisburg tomorrow.

The affirmative team of the men's debate team will be David Scott, junior in agricultural economics from Chatham, N.J., and George Haines, junior in education from Nottingham. Jonathan Plaut, junior in industrial engineering from Rockville Centre, N.Y., and Edward Klevans, junior in electrical engineering from Roaring Spring, will be the negative team.

The women's debate team affirmative group will be Marilee Kahanowitz, freshman in arts and letters from Latrobe, and Nancy Berneski, freshman in arts and letters from Latrobe. The negative team will be Elaine Cimmet, sophomore in arts and letters from Olyphant, and Rebecca Zahm, junior in journalism from Johnstown.

The topic for the tournament will be Resolved: That the non-agricultural industries of the United States should guarantee their employees an annual wage.

The tournament will include three rounds using the orthodox style of one ten-minute constructive speech and one five-minute rebuttal for each speaker. The tournament is considered a goodwill tournament.

Saturday's tournament was scheduled because the Bucknell tournament was postponed in December due to poor weather.

The team members will be accompanied by Joseph F. O'Brien, professor of public speaking, and Goodwin Berquist, graduate in speech from Boalsburg.

In a discussion period, a member of the audience charged that Negro students have a hard time finding downtown rooms. The usual reply of landlords is, "Sorry, we're all filled up now," he said.

Another member of the audience mentioned that cards in the Dean of Men's Office listing rooms for rent are often labeled "no negroes," or "no foreign students."

Girl Refused Teaching
It was also reported to the panel that a Negro girl majoring in French and who had expected to start her student-teacher tour next semester was told that she could not teach in the school she had been assigned to because her master teacher refused to accept her.

One of the panel members, a Negro, said he had been refused service by a State College barber at the end of last semester.

These charges were made on the floor of the meeting and were not actually substantiated.

Bernard Gives Reasons
Dr. Jessie Barnard, professor of sociology, gave some of the reasons for resistance to integration. She called rationalizations such fears as "the mongrelization of the white race," and the fear of high rate of venereal disease among Negroes.

"The people who resent most bitterly the advancement of colored people," she said, "are the lower classes, such as custodians, who fear they have the most to lose."

They are afraid it will mean more competition for their jobs, she said.

Integration in the schools is opposed because Negro children are retarded several years behind the white children because of the poor schooling they have received, she said.

Members of the panel were Lester Alston, senior in psychology from Pottsville; Stanley Greenblatt, senior in psychology from Philadelphia; Leon Cooper, senior in arts and letters from Savannah, Ga.; and Matthew Robinson, sophomore in arts and letters from Philadelphia.
