TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Feb. 7 (P)—A Negro coed today gave University of Alabama officials just 48 hours to re-admit her as a student.

3 Receive Dishonesty Penalties

The dean of men's office reported yesterday that three more students have been penalized under the University's new academic honesty policy. This makes seven students who have been penalized under the policy that went into effect this year.

Two of the students were from the College of Mineral Industries. Both received disciplinary probation. One, a senior in metallurgy, was put on disciplinary probation for plagiarizing.

The other student, a sophomore in mineral industries, was put on probation for the next two semesters for premeditated cheating, which includes such offenses as plagiarizing or having crib notes.

The third student, a sophomore in the College of Business Administration, was penalized by having a disciplinary memorandum placed in the dean of men's office, the office of the dean of the college and the office of his adviser.

He was caught in the act of premeditated cheating in a ROTC test in Schwab Auditorium. The student's parents were also notified of the offense.

The academic honesty policy states that all violations will be entered on the student's permanent record. It may be petitioned off after one year.

The last student to be penalized was a sophomore in the division of intermediate registration who was given a year's disciplinary probation on Jan. 5 for possessing crib notes in a chemistry laboratory.

Coeds at Pitt Offer No Help In 'Help Week'

A University of Pittsburgh student is disillusioned with the ways of sorority women.

He is Tony Traficante, co-chairman of Pitt's "Help Week," now in progress for both fraternities and sororities.

Traficante's disillusionment was caused by three sororities who failed to show up because of a heavy downpour to help with the "Week."

Delta Delta Delta showed, but Traficante is wondering what happened to Delta Zeta, Theta Phi Alpha, and Alpha Epsilon Pi.

Traficante told the Pittsburgh Press that for the past few years the Pitt fraternities have sent pledges out to do labor as part of their duties during initiation week, once known as "Hell Week."

"The fraternity men never let anybody down," Traficante said.

Traficante has learned his lesson. He will "stick with the fraternities" in future "Help Weeks."

Fire Victim's Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services of Charles Kiethline Jr. will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kiethline, 57 N. Main street, Shickshinny.

Kiethline, who was a sophomore in mechanical engineering, died early Monday morning in a log cabin fire near Lake Groton, Vt. Kiethline was unable to escape from the second floor of the cabin in which he and four other students were spending the weekend before returning to campus.

One of the students, Eric Proudfoot, sophomore in applied arts from Oil City, was burned on the face and hands. He was reported improved yesterday morning at Brightlook Hospital, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Three students who escaped without injury are Theodore Miller, sophomore in agricultural education from Washington, Pa., Joseph Duraney, sophomore in electrical engineering from Brownfield, and Walter Majka, sophomore in civil engineering from Binghamton, N.Y.

Proudfoot is a member of Pi Kappa Phi while the other three are members of Delta Chi.

The blaze is believed by Vermont fire authorities to have started in an overheated wood-burning stove. The fire broke out at 3:30 a.m. and spread rapidly. Flames made it impossible for the other students to reach Kiethline.

Duraney ran four miles over the snow-covered roads before he could get help. The car used by the students to get to the cabin had stalled. When authorities arrived at the fire site, they found the cabin completely destroyed.

The students were spending the weekend at the cabin after attending the Dartmouth College Winter Carnival in Hanover, N.H. The cabin was owned by Proudfoot's parents.

Delta Chi members plan to attend the funeral in Shickshinny.

Christ-Janer Made Director Of Art School

Albert W. Christ-Janer, of New York University, has been named director of the School of Fine and Applied Arts and professor of art at the University, effective last Tuesday.

The appointment to the newly-created position was approved at the Jan. 21 meeting of the Board of Trustees in Harrisburg.

The new school, which includes the departments of art, music, and theater arts, was established last August. Starting last Tuesday, it is now a unit of the College of the Liberal Arts.

Christ-Janer, a native of Appleton, Minn., received his BA degree from St. Olaf College and his MA degree in fine arts at Yale University. He also studied at Harvard University and with the Fogg Museum.

Appointed an instructor in art at Stephens College in 1934, he served as professor and head of the art department there from 1937 to 1942. He was director of the summer art program at that school for three years.

From 1942 to 1945, he was professor of art and head of the department of art at Michigan State University, and from 1945 to 1947 was director of the museum and library of Cranbrook Academy of Art. He was on leave in 1942 and 1943 for service in the Army.

In 1947, he was named director of humanities development at the University of Chicago, and in 1952 he accepted his present position at New York University.

In 1952, he was appointed a Guggenheim Fellow and in 1955 he received a Rockefeller award.

University Gets $100,000 Grant

A gift of more than $116,740, believed to be the largest gift ever received by the University, has been forwarded to the University under the terms of a deed of trust drawn up in 1924 by the late Dr. James Gilbert White.

Dr. White, an 1882 graduate of the University, was a trustee of the University from 1903 until his death in 1942. He established with a gift of $25,000 the James A. Beaver Loan Fund for Men, and with an additional $25,000, the Mary Beaver White Loan Fund for Women.

The $116,740 gift, announced Jan. 26, was provided by Dr. White in 1924 as a deed in trust to his son, J. Dugald White, the income to go to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Lydia M. Kroupsky. Mrs. Kroupsky died last June and the principle of the fund was then forwarded to the University to be added to the James A. Beaver Loan Fund.

First Student Literary Venture In Two Years To Go on Sale

Editorial on page four
The Lantern, the first literary venture by students since the failure of Inkling in the spring of 1954, will go on sale today.

The magazine contains five original short stories and several poems contributed by seven students.

The articles written by the students were done especially for the Lantern and were not written in connection with any course. Pivof, a poetry magazine which is published once a year, contains poems by faculty members and students written in connection with a course in English literature. The 28-page Lantern has no advertising and is completely financed by the Liberal Arts Student Council. It sells for 25 cents.

Virginia Hudgins, editor, said the failure of previous literary publications was due to lack of sufficient financial backing rather than lack of interest on the part of students. However, the appeal for this sort of magazine is not so widespread as that of a humor magazine like Froth, she said.

Other literary attempts in the last decade, in spite of their genuine literary merit, have been marked with financial failure, none apparently in the black consistently longer than one year.

Portfolio, an early literary publication, folded under war-time pressures and the New Portfolio emerged. This in turn was transformed into Critique. A 50-page issue of Critique, prepared along a heavy photographic slant to gain a bigger audience, was sent to a Pittsburgh printer who refused to print it until a substantial deposit was made to guarantee his bill and Critique was ended.

In the fall of 1949, $600 was appropriated by the All-University Cabinet for the support of a literary magazine. Inkling was launched in October, 1950 with considerably more public attention than any of its predecessors but was discontinued in April 1954.

The Lantern was begun two years ago by the Liberal Arts Student Council as a general feature magazine and has been changed this year to a literary format. This will be the first time that such a publication has had complete financial backing by a student group.
