

Young Dems Accept GOP Challenge

The Young Democratic Club voted last night to accept a challenge from the Young Republicans Club to open informal debate or panel discussion on "The Record of the Eisenhower Administration."

The event is scheduled for 7 p.m. Feb. 14. Participants from the Young Republicans Club are David Scott, junior in agriculture economics and rural sociology from Chatham, N.J., and Carl Saperstein, senior in arts and letters from Washington, D.C. The Young Democratic Club will select its participants within the next few days.

Under other business it was decided to postpone indefinitely a panel program arranged for members of the club.

The Young Republicans agreed to seek a national figure to debate with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) who will be sponsored by the Young Democratic Club. The time and topic of the debate will be decided upon by Sen. Humphrey and his Republican opponent in Washington, D.C. Sen. Humphrey earlier agreed to debate with a Republican national leader at the University.

Alan Maloney, senior in arts and letters from Teaneck, N.J., and head of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, spoke to the group about the model presidential nomination convention to be held March 10 in the Hetzel Union Building.

It will be a regional ICG convention with 14 colleges from central Pennsylvania participating. Among convention activities will be the adoption of party platforms and formal nomination speeches for actual presidential candidates. Maloney announced that 50 colleges will participate in the three-day state convention which will be held in Harrisburg.

Persons wishing to participate in either the regional or state convention must attend the next four Monday night meetings of the ICG.
