

Today's Weather:
Rain and Snow

The Daily Collegian

FOR A BETTER PENN STATE

What Makes
Joe College Cheat?
See Page 4

VOL. 56, No. 82

STATE COLLEGE, PA., WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 15, 1956

FIVE CENTS

Milholland Dies at 69

Head of Trustees Suffers Heart Attack

By RON LEIK

James Milholland, who last month was elected to his 11th term as president of the Board of Trustees of the University, died at 8:30 p.m. yesterday in Magee Hospital, Pittsburgh. He was 69.

Doctors said Milholland suffered three heart attacks Monday and three yesterday. It is believed that the Board of Trustees will elect a successor to Milholland at its next meeting in June.

Milholland had been hospitalized since Feb. 5 from a heart attack. A veteran attorney and judge, he had been president of the Board of Trustees since 1946.

Born in 1887, Judge Milholland was a life-long resident of Pittsburgh. His home was at 6378 Jackson street.

Entered University in 1907

He entered Penn State in 1907 as a pre-legal student, and in 1911 he qualified for his bachelor of arts degree. He then entered the University of Pittsburgh where he earned his bachelor of laws degree in 1914.

While at Penn State, Judge Milholland earned all his educational and living expenses and found time for extracurricular activities. He managed his class baseball team and during his senior year he was manager of Thespians. He was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, national social fraternity.

Led Alumni

Judge Milholland's active interest in Penn State led to his election in 1926 to the presidency of the Penn State Alumni Association. He was re-elected for a second term in 1927.

In 1930, Judge Milholland was appointed to the Board of Trustees to finish two years of an unexpired term.

Acted as President

Following the death of President Ralph Dorn Hetzel on Oct. 3, 1947, Judge Milholland was named acting president of the University. He served in that capacity until Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower assumed the presidency on July 1, 1950.

During World War I, Judge Milholland served in France with the 8th Field Artillery of the American Expeditionary Forces. Following the war, he resumed his law practice in Pittsburgh as a

(Continued on page eight)

James Milholland
Trustee Dies

Prexy Lauds Milholland

President Milton S. Eisenhower, informed last night of the death of James Milholland, president of the University's Board of Trustees, issued a statement calling Milholland a "devoted student, alumnus, and leader of The Pennsylvania State University."

President Eisenhower's statement follows:
"For nearly 50 years, James Milholland was a devoted student, alumnus, and leader of The Pennsylvania State University. He worked constantly to improve the quality of its program and to make its services avail-

(Continued on page eight)

Play Program Stirs Campus Excitement

By PAT O'NEILL

Who could have possibly imagined, back in 1861, the excitement that a little program from a play, "The Merchant of Venice," would stir up?

This production shows that dramatic societies were active on campus so far back that the "Shakespearean Representation by the Thespian Corps of the W.A.L. Society on Friday evening, Oct. 25th, 1861," may well have been the very first drama production at the University.

After the death of Samuel Everhart, former resident of State College, his son, William, discovered among his father's old papers a program of a Washington Agricultural Literary Society production in 1861. The words, "Thespian Corps," were written on the title page.

Everhart sent the program to Ray Fortunato, who is in charge of Thespians. Realizing that the program dated too far back to be related to the present Thespians, Mr. Fortunato was going to throw the program away but then decided to give it to Louis H. Bell, director of Public Information. Bell, not knowing anything about the program, sent it to Mrs. Mary L. Mairs, who is in the Penn State room on the fourth floor of the Pattee Library. Mrs. Mairs immediately started research work on the old program and so far has received interest-

(Continued on page eight)

Collegian Editorial Staff Calls Candidates

New candidates for the Daily Collegian editorial staff will meet at 7 tonight in 9 Carnegie.

Donald Shoemaker, city editor, said men are especially needed.

Interested students need not be journalism majors.

A TELEVISION camera is operated by remote control by Charles Marsh, assistant professor of electrical engineering, in order to accompany his lectures in EE 8 with visual aids. The television system in the EE building does not send a picture to other rooms. Both the camera and receiving set are used in the same lecture hall. This system is used only as an auxiliary to a lecture course, in order that students in the rear of the room can see demonstrations easily. The apparatus, assembled by Marsh, consists of a well built into a table top where small charts, graphs, and pictures can be photographed by the camera. Wall meters, scales, and parts of the text are also enlarged on the screen.

—Ed Springman photo

1200 Waring Show Tickets Remain

Approximately 1000 general admission tickets for the Fred Waring show, "Hear! Hear!" are on sale at the Hetzel Union desk and the ticket office in Recreation Hall.

Reserved seat tickets can be obtained only at the ticket office in Rec Hall. There are 200 reserved seats available at $2.20. General admission is $1.10.

The show, presented by Waring and His Pennsylvanians, will be given at 8:30 p.m. next Friday in Rec Hall.

Penn State Engineer

The February issue of the Penn State Engineer is on sale today through Saturday at the Hetzel Union desk.

The Engineer Girl of the Month is Beverly Rodgers, a second semester home economics student from Brentwood.

Rain, Snow Forecast

Rain, changing to snow, is the forecast for today as given by students in the department of meteorology. The predicted high for today is 40 degrees and 25 is the expected low.

Morse to Receive Degree At Temple Commencement

Adrian O. Morse, who will retire as provost of the University next month, will be presented with an honorary doctor of laws degree today at Temple University's mid-year commencement exercises.

Morse is one of six to be presented honorary degrees at the exercises, which will be held at 11 a.m. in the Baptist Temple of Philadelphia.

Roy E. Larson, president of Time, Inc., and Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks will speak at the exercises. Five hundred students of Temple University will be graduated.

In presenting the degree to Morse, who has worked in the president's office at the University since 1929, Dr. Millard E. Gladfelter, provost of Temple University, will read the following citation:

"I have the honor, Mr. President, of presenting a man who for two decades has directed the academic program of one of the most respected institutions of higher learning in Pennsylvania. This University's steady growth in standards and reputation in the community of American colleges bears testimony to his educational vision.

"He knows well the character of training which a great commonwealth requires for its citizens. His educational statesmanship will be easily understood in the light of the broad background of experience he brought to his present position. He had been a teacher of English, dean of men, executive secretary to the presidents of two universities, assistant to the secretary of agriculture of the United States. Beyond this, he has been a leader in civic affairs in his community wherever this has been.

"In recognition of his usefulness to the State and nation, I give you, Mr. President, for the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, the provost of the Pennsylvania State University, Adrian Osborn Morse."

Ike Seen Fit for 2d Term

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—A medical jury today found President Dwight D. Eisenhower physically fit for a second term in the White House.

Its verdict brought fresh predictions from GOP leaders that Eisenhower would run again, and stock shot up on the San Francisco and Los Angeles exchanges, which were still open when the news broke.

Dr. Paul Dudley White, the President's chief heart consultant, reported he and five other physicians had told Eisenhower he "should be able to carry on an active life" in the presidency "for another five to 10 years."

But it is still up to Eisenhower to decide if he will lead the Republican party through another presidential campaign this year of his Gettysburg, Pa., farm. "The choice is his, not ours," White told about 100 reporters gathered to hear the doctors' verdict.

Although Dr. White spoke of

Sen. Styles Bridges (R.-N.H.) said last night that he believes President Dwight D. Eisenhower will seek a second term. The question was asked the senator a few hours after the President's latest medical report was released.

Sen. Bridges spoke at the Centre County Republican Lincoln Day dinner last night at the Nittany Lion Inn.

"five to 10 years," the Constitution limits presidents to two elective terms. Under the 22nd Amendment which became effective five years ago this month, Eisenhower thus could serve only one more four-year term.

The medical report was good news to those who want Eisenhower to run for re-election.

"It sounds to me like they've given him the green light," said Sen. George D. Aiken (R.-Vt.), one of the original Eisenhower men. Sen. Frank Carlson (R.-Kan.) called it "the best news the people of the United States and the world have had since the President was stricken."

Democrats expressed pleasure at the President's recovery but doubt that he is strong enough to carry on for another five years.

"There's a great deal of difference between carrying on the full load of the presidency and just staying in the White House," commented Sen. John J. Sparkman (D.-Ala.), the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1952. "When he weighs everything, I still believe he won't run."