

State's Schools Keep Seeking Funds — Bradley

By RON LEIK

Andrew M. Bradley, budget secretary of Pennsylvania, said last night the schools in the state are constantly in contact with Harrisburg in search of operating funds.

The only appropriation the schools have got so far this biennium was $43 million, which went to fourth class districts.

The funds went to these districts since they were the hardest hit districts because of their relatively small borrowing power, Bradley said.

The budget secretary, who spoke at a meeting of the Accounting Club, reiterated the administration's contention that a classified income tax, like the one Gov. George M. Leader originally proposed, would be more justified than a sales tax.

Classified Tax Explained
Economists have proved, he said, that the incidence of a classified income tax would fall on the tax payers almost as identically as the federal income tax.

Whereas, the burden of a sales tax, he continued, would fall upon the lower income groups. As an example, he pointed out the fact that even those persons on public assistance would have to pay a sales tax.

The revenue on some industries in the Commonwealth is not as high as national trends in the same industries, he said.

Cigarette Revenues Drop
The revenue from cigarette sales in the state dropped $1½ million during the period of adverse publicity concerning lung cancer, Bradley said.

No tax legislation has been passed so far because the two political parties differ so greatly in their tax philosophies.

One factor in favor of an income tax is that during one year only 10 per cent of Pennsylvanians have savings which would be affected by this tax, while 50 per cent of the people spend more money than they earn. The latter, and larger group, would be more heavily affected by a sales tax, he said. This tax policy is based on the "ability to pay" philosophy.

TIM to Hold Dance in May

Town Independent Men will sponsor a Mother's Day dance with Eugene Magill and James Ressler and the 18-piece Association of Independent Men band on Friday, May 12, in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

A queen, chosen from finalists of entrants submitted to TIM, will be crowned during intermission. An opening date for entries is being arranged, according to Robert Cole, TIM president.

The decoration theme for the dance will be white carnations. Admission will be $1.50 per couple.

Cole said TIM will attempt to operate on a budget of $245 for the dance. The HUB ballroom will cost TIM $100.

Social chairman Leonard Phillips, said he expected between 450 and 500 persons to attend. He said the estimate was based on 500 attending the Lollipop Ball, sponsored by TIM last semester.

The AIM band made their first appearance at the Lollipop Ball. Cole said TIM was re-engaging the band because of the favorable comments he received on the band.

Candidates to Meet

The Daily Collegian business staff candidates will meet at 7:15 tonight in 217 Willard. The promotion staff will meet at 7:15 tonight in 202 Willard.

Three Professors Selected For 'Last Lecture' Series

Mortar Board, senior women's hat society, will sponsor the "Last Lecture Series" which will be comprised of lectures by three University professors.

The professors may speak on any subject they choose, and are to present the lecture as though it were their last.

Dr. Michael Chiappetta, assistant professor of education, will speak at the first lecture at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 23 in the Hetzel Union auditorium.

Dr. Kent Forster, professor of European history, will speak on March 1, and Dr. Henry A. Finch, associate professor of philosophy, will speak at a later date.

Similar series have been presented by Mortar Board chapters at other colleges with success, according to Mary Buchanan, a member of Mortar Board.

Mortar Board hopes to enlarge the cultural program at the University through the series, she added.

HEC to Present 'Weekend' Skit At Convocation

A skit depicting activities of the Home Economics Spring Weekend will be presented at the Home Economics Spring Convocation at 4:10 p.m. Tuesday in Schwab Auditorium.

The convocation was planned to explain events for the Spring Weekend, and to interest freshman students to participate in the weekend. The weekend is scheduled for April 21 and 22.

One skit, personifying students and faculty members in the college is being planned, according to Dixie Waring, program chairman.

Dr. Grace Henderson, dean of the College of Home Economics, will present her conclusions on the weekend gathered from the various skits.

The Spring Weekend in April is designed specifically for high school students who may have questions about courses for the coming year. Exhibitions, skits, and tours are being planned.

Shirley Fry, senior in home economics from Johnsonburg, is student chairman of the convocation. In addition to Miss Waring, she is being assisted by Thomas Williams, music; and Martha Bauder and John Voegler, publicity.

Waring to Present Show Next Friday

Fred Waring, alumnus of the University and former member of the Board of Trustees, will present his 70-song musical show "Hear! Hear!" next Friday night in Recreation Hall.

The three hour show, which opened on Broadway and is on a six month tour of the United States, is a survey of American music from spirituals to "pop."

Fred Waring, Jr., freshman at the University last year, plays trombone in the Waring orchestra. In the show, he directs the "Pennsylvanians" version of the "Sadistic Six," plays the banjo in "Minstrel Show," sings with the Glee Club, and dances in the Hill-billy sequence. The "Sadistic Six" is a campus jazz band.

Waring originated his "Pennsylvanians" on the campus of the University in 1921, when he was a sophomore in architectural engineering. At that time he had organized a group known as the Banjazzatra, called so because of the predominance of banjos. Later it was known as the "Pennsylvanians."

That year Waring and his orchestra went to the University of Michigan to play for a dance. They did so well they got a job for a week in the Madison Theater in Detroit. This eventually led to a 15-week engagement at $1500 a week.

That was the end of college for the "Pennsylvanians" and the beginning of a colorful career in entertainment.

Waring was born in Tyrone, and now makes his home at Shawnee-on-Delaware. While the public connects him chiefly with the field of entertainment, he is interested in other businesses as head of Fred Waring Enterprises, Inc.

These include the Fred Waring Choral Workshop, operation of the Shawnee Inn and Country Club, and a music publishing firm.

Dixie Lee, his daughter, is a senior in home economics at the University.

Three Roles Are Open For Play

Three acting parts are still open for "The Alchemist," a Penn State Players production which will open Feb. 24 and run for five weekends at Center Stage.

Tomorrow is the last day the parts will remain open. Interested students should leave cards with the Theatre Arts secretary or the stage manager, JoAnn Palmer, graduate student in English literature from Philadelphia. If possible, students should see Miss Palmer, Paul Talley, assistant director, or Kelly Yeaton, director at 7 tonight or tomorrow in the Green Room. Students should also put their telephone number on the card.

Special coaching sessions will be held for the students who get the parts.

Major Role Open

The parts include Pertinax Surly, a major male role, and two villagers, one male and one female. The part of Pertinax Surly should be played by a fairly dark person as he plays a Spaniard in his disguise. Students trying out for the part should be able to learn adequate Spanish for a number of lines. Some experience in costume roles is desirable.

For the part of the villagers types are preferred such as a heavy landlord and landlady or small nagging types, however, average types can also be used.

Cast Named

Included in the cast for the Alchemist are Millis Mershon as Widow Pliant; James Jimirro, Kas-tril; Dennis Schweitzer, Ananias; Vincent Carlone, Tribulation Wholesome; Paul Talley, Mammion; Gerald Denisof, Lovewit; Daniel Long, Druggier; Alan Hill, Dapper; Mrs. Donald Barton, Dol Common; Jon Wilder, Trace; and Newell Stark, Subtle.

WRA Swimming Club To Meet in White Hall

The Women's Recreation Association Swim Club will meet at 6:45 tonight at the pool in White Hall.

The advanced group will meet at 7:30. Women who joined the club last semester and are interested in being in the aquacade should attend the meeting.

Frank Ward, sophomore in agricultural education from Mercer, reporter; and Darrel Major, junior in agricultural education from Truicks-ville, chaplain.
