Political Parties: The Lady or the Lion?

Please, No Athletes . . .

Action in_the campus political field starts in earnest tomorrow night and we hope it won't resemble the actions seen on an athletic field.

The goal of every political party is to elect its candidates and to represent its viewpoints in the government. Parties at Penn State cannot be expected to represent viewpoints-they have none. Thus, their purpose dwindles to electing candidates.

And with this as their function, parties are prone to nominate not those most capable of doing a good job, but primarily those most likely to win the election.

The lemptation that faces them, then, is to premint the left of the companion of o nominate athletes, preferably big-name athnominate athletes, preferably big-name athletes. Past performances have shown a tendency on the part of the Penn State populace to be athletically-minded at the polls. Consequentially, ballots have read like line-ups.

We hope the students who turn out for tomorrow night's political meetings will know better—and will demonstrate more sense than many of their predecessors of past years.

many of their predecessors of past years.

Participation in athletics doesn't disqualify a man automatically. But the record shows something more than a tendency for the athletic politician to be something less than suited for his governmental role.

Athletes generally have neither the experience nor the time to hold office and do a good job in both their fields. The athletes most likely to get the political nod are the successful athletes in the major sports—and these are the ones who must spend the greatest portion of their time in training or on road trips. The successful office-holder should have acquired his training on committees and in activities— not on the athletic field.

Office-holding at Penn State should be something more than collecting prestige and com-pensation. It will not be more than this if the office holders are qualified to do nothing else. And the amount of time the office-holder will have available is a qualification that should be remembered at tomorrow night's nominating

The parties will do a disservice to themselves, to student government, to the athletes, and to Penn State's athletic aspirations by yielding to the temptation of nominating athletes.

Safety Valve Progress, Greek Style TO THE EDITOR: In reference to the letter

from Interfraternity Council President Robert F Bullock; Mr. Bullock asked the casual reader to consider some questions which he advanced on the part of unbiased good fellowship and brotherhood. As a casual reader, I would like to say my answers to all his questions are negative and I disagree with him, casually, of

After reading some of the recent articles alluded to by Mr. Bullock, I do not see "an evil in the American way of life," only a fault to be corrected. I cannot bring myself to believe that the fraternity is part of our way of life, and am disturbed at the possibility that it may already have become a permanent and indispensable custom. From the letter, it would seem that the Greek-letter societies are a bastion upon which the Union leans heavily. The fact that many college students small and great have undergone initiation and pre-initiation rites is further proof of the flaws in the present

Mr. Bullock deplores the "undue literary attention" given to "recent unfortunate occurrances." As I recall, the boy at M.I.T. did not sprain his wrist. He died.

We are reassured that the Interfraternity Council has been talking about this problem for three years running, and that he feels certain a solution will be worked out this year in the name of progress. It all depends what you mean

... But Consider Women

Ladies be seated—on Cabinet.

Even though few Cabinet positions are closed to women the lack of them at meetings is noticeable if not distracting. Only four of this year's 25 seats are held by women, and that's just here just because there are no men in the Women's Student Government Association, Women's Rec-reation Association, Panhellenic Council, and Action should be taken against this. And to-morrow night's clique meetings provide the

If she is cute she may get into office. If she is competent she may stay there.

There's no limit to what women could do for this campus. Ladies be seated - No! Ladies,

Last Scores First

We're glad that the "Last Lecture" sponsored by Mortar Board Thursday night was only the first of the semester.

The senior women's honorary society has hit upon a fine idea in its lecture series which presents outstanding professors who are supposed to speak as if their talk were to be the last they could deliver.

Thursday night's lecture by Dr. Michael Chiappetta proved this formula to be a success as we are sure the near capacity audience which attended would affirm.

The remaining lectures to be delivered by Dr. Kent Forester, professor of European History, and Dr. Henry A. Finch, associate professor of philosophy, promise to be just as stimulating and worthwhile.

Dr. Forster will speak next Thursday and Dr. Finch on March 15. The reputations of the two professors should certainly assure sizable audi-

The University community owes Mortar Board a vote of thanks for sponsoring this fine series. We are sure that the "Last Lectures" will prove to be a much anticipated annual event.

Cabinet, Arise!

- By JACKIE HUDGINS -

Honest, Cabinet, I don't care how many of your members or friends get paid (compensated or scholarshipped), but it's the implications of employing all these people that worries me.

The main reason I'm disturbed about compensations regards retirement. Have you set up a fund for retired student leaders? After working semester upon semester what have the student leaders to look forward to if there's no longterm material reward?

To set up a retirement or social security program you would have to collect dues quarterly from the employed. Just how much in dues you would have to collect from each individual would, of course, depend upon the exact amount the individual receives from Cabinet. Unless you entrust all this bookkeeping to the Associated Student Activities office a committee would be your best bet for an efficiently run fund—a committee we suggest you call Cabinet's Committee on Charitable Contributions to Retired Student Leaders (CCCCRSL).

and progressive about this, you certainly should consider the Guaranteed Annual Wage. This sounds fair enough but it would $25 for Rules Violation sounds fair enough but it would be a handicap if a student were thrown out of his position. Would Cabinet continue to pay him for his unexpired term at the rate it promised to pay him at the time of his election or appointment?

Surely your employees will want to unionize for their own protection. You can't blame them. But think of the dangers of such a move. Members will be calling meetings at their convenience. A maximum-hours work week will be set up and Cabinet management will be lucky if it can get the union together long enough to hold one of its sessions, even a shortie. As soon as roll is called members will be squirming in their respective seats anxious to leave. And some week none of the members will show up. They will be on strike—maybe it will be for more money-maybe for more prestige, if they're e ighth semester seniors—or maybe because they don't like the meeting place—someday
