KRUFKA'S UNTOLD INJURY:

Of all the stories stemming from last week's Eastern Intercollegiate wrestling tournament probably the most discussed one was the case of Lion 177-pounder, Joe Krufka. Why he was the main topic of discussion is easy to realize. One of the top pre-tourney favorites and second-seeded in his division only to Pitt's Ed DeWitt, Krufka ended in fourth place.

Although fourth place is considered almost excellent for any wrestler, for Krufka it isn't.;

The fans' expectations of Krufka EIWA's was trainer Chuck Medbefore the tournament were that lar. To express the value that he should win it or at least be mossibility. second. Anything lower than that was taboo. Krufka lived up to expectations the first day, when he pinned Don Mayer, Princeton. in the first round of action and then that night, in the quarter finals, shut-out Clinton Blume, Colgate, 3-0. Krufka was beaten by Navy's Ed Zabrycki, who he had beaten 9-0 earlier this year, 7-2. And in the colsolation match he was de-cisioned by Ron Fleming, of Franklin and Marshall, 5-2. The veteran trainer went with-out meals, stayed at the gym for hours taking care of injuries, sure, and was a combination nursemaid and doctor. The members of the team when asked what they thought of Med-lar's work at the tournament re-ments ranging from: "Without him we couldn't have gotten to first base," to "He's the greatest th .g Penn State sports have." Speidel called him his "silent partner" and said that he was the

This was too much for the sup-cope with. This is the reason for the sup-posedly disappointing showing of Krufka, even though some fans might look upon this as sour grapes or just plain excuses for losing. Kruf-ka was injured in practice when he pulled the muscles connecting his chest and back.
