of the 100-vote penalty. Miss Mertz polled 478 votes to Miss Thierwechter's 465.

Bahrenburg defeated William Johnson for the All-University presidency by 515 votes, 1731 to 1216. Clark scored the largest majority of the election over Thomas Dye for the All-University presidency, 1754 to 1120.

Joseph Hartnett, Vincent Paparella, and Jean McMahon won the three Senior class positions. Hartnett defeated Samuel Valentine, 511 to 294; Paparella defeated Schatz, 475 to 298; and McMahon defeated Barbara Nicholls, 472 to 322.

Harry Martini won the Junior class presidency and Richard Doyle will be next year's Junior class vice president. Martini polled 496 votes to Miss Daniels' 458 and Doyle won over John Olsen, 586 to 359.

have a democratic government," according to Dye.

'Right' to Vote Not Denied

Roger Beidler, Elections Committee chairman, said the committee has not denied the right to vote to any student. Rather, he said, all the votes were tallied and then the penalties were levied. This, he contended, does not deny the right to vote.

In his second case Spadaro contended that Elections Committee penalized the Lion party more than the violations warranted, and that the violations incurred did not constitute an "extreme case." Gordon Pogal, member of the Elections Committee, charged that individually the violations were not extreme, but taken all together they constituted a "whopper" in the eyes of the Elections Committee.

Spadaro also contested the authority of the committee to pass judgment on party planks. He said the University administration has no right to determine what are issues, and said he felt it did in the past elections. Platforms, he said, should not have to meet with the approval of the committee.

Pogal said the Elections Committee, according to precedent, maintains the right to review and censor party planks.

Cabinet upheld the committee's stand because the members felt that Cabinet had given the committee the power to regulate elections and it had carried out this power.

Douglas Moorhead, Athletic Association president, suggested that Elections Committee evaluate itself as to what powers it does have.

Democrats Predict Borrowing Increase

State Democratic leaders predicted the State Legislature will finally agree to increase the borrowing capacity of the General State Authority by $90 to $100, the Associated Press said yesterday.
