Bus Ad Dean Praises Plan For Counselling

The University's student counselling program has passed the experimental stage, Ossian R. MacKenzie, dean of the College of Business Administration, has said in an article, "Student Counselling in Operation."

The article appears in the March issue of the Journal of Business Education.

Writing about the program which was instituted less than three years ago, shortly after the College was established at the University, Dean MacKenzie attributes the success of the program to the identification of difficulties early in the student's college career.

The counselling program uses the services of two regular staff members on a part-time basis and a doctorate candidate in psychology. Students are invited to make appointments for personal and private interviews with the staff and faculty members who often refer students to the service when they sight trouble developing.

The present counselling service includes Dr. William M. Hench, associate professor of international trade, W. J. Schrader, assistant professor of accounting, and George Middleton, doctorate candidate in psychology.

Staking for New Dorms Underway

Workmen on the new women's dormitories to be constructed along E. College avenue behind Simmons Hall have begun staking out the area in preparation for excavation, which is expected to be started in a few days.

Walter H. Wiegand, director of Physical Plant, said yesterday that the contractor and the supervisor have been looking over the site for several days.

The project, which will consist of four dormitories and a dining center, is expected to be completed by fall, 1957.

The dorms, which will have facilities for 1064 coeds, will be located along E. College avenue, extending from Shortridge road to Eastview terrace.

Each of the four buildings will consist of two complete residence units, and a central dining hall with four dining rooms.

All buildings will be of red brick with limestone trim, resembling the combination used in the Hetzel Union Building.

The dorms will have four main floors, while the dining center will have two floors.

Each of the eight units will be approximately 160 feet long and 40 feet wide. The over-all length of each building will be 315 feet.

The two living units in each building will be separated by glass-enclosed stairwells.

Two sorority lounges will be housed on the main floor of each unit, which will make eight lounges available for sororities to rent. These will be about the size of four student rooms and will include a kitchenette and storage space adjoining the lounge.

Individual campaigns will be carried on from 12 to 12:30 p.m. and 5 to 5:30 p.m. tomorrow and from 12 to 12:30 p.m. Thursday. They will be confined to the Mall from College avenue to Pollock road. Use of automobiles or floats is forbidden during campaigns and sound equipment may not be used.

Final Judging Thursday
Final judging will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Hetzel Union ballroom. Seven finalists will be selected from the highest number of votes. Bonus awards of 1500 points will be awarded to each of the three outstanding floats. In addition, each finalist will present a skit depicting why he is the ugliest of the ugly men.

The winner of the contest is judged on the basis of individual campaigns, skits, and originality. The winner receives an Ugly Man key and the group sponsoring him receives a trophy.

Sponsored by APhiO
Alpha Phi Omega, national service honor society and sponsor of the Ugly Man contest, announced that the money taken in from penny voting will be put into three different funds. Formerly, all proceeds from the contest went to the Campus Chest.

This year, proceeds will be divided between the Beaver Dam Recreation Area, Campus Chest, and Alpha Phi Omega service projects.

Last year's winner was Donald Rice, sponsored by Lambda Chi Alpha.

No Phys Ed Funds Available for Dam

Editorial on page four
Ernest B. McCoy, dean of the College of Physical Education and Athletics, said yesterday his college has no funds at present to donate to the development of the proposed Beaver Dam recreation area.

All-University Cabinet last week passed a pending motion to donate $5000 to the Beaver Dam project in hopes that other interested groups would donate further funds to the $50,000 needed to complete improvements on the area.

It was suggested that the College of Physical Education and Athletics, which had shown interest in the project, donate insurance money from a ski lodge which burned down in 1950 to the Beaver Dam proposal.

McCoy doubts the insurance money could be given to the project as the ski lodge was "in all probability, constructed by the University, and couldn't possibly have belonged to the Physical Education college." Therefore, any insurance money collected after the fire was turned over to the University, McCoy said.

The lodge might even have been a class gift to the University, McCoy said, and the insurance money would belong to the donating class.

The Physical Education college receives tax fund appropriations from the University to cover expenditures of this type, he said, but no funds out of the appropriation have been set aside for the Beaver Dam project. The college has long range plans to improve the area, but it would be an expensive proposition with a minimum of $12,000 needed just to clear the artificial lake and construct bathing facilities, he said.

The bathing area could not be constructed from the Cabinet appropriation and the fire insurance money alone, McCoy said. The lake must be emptied first to clear the bottom of tree stumps and other obstructions. Then the dam must be repaired, and a sandy beach built up for bathers.

The buildings and other improvements would have to come later, he said. McCoy has no idea where further funds might come from to complete the project. The University might go along and provide the insurance funds to the project, he said.

All-University Cabinet also suggested that the $25,000 combined gifts of the classes of 1948, 1949, and 1950 be donated to the project.

The funds were originally designated for a University printing press. The idea was later termed unfeasible, and the money was placed in trust for future use of the combined classes.

Ridge Riley, secretary of the alumni association, said Cabinet, in order to have the funds channeled into the Beaver Dam project, would have to get the permission of the secretaries of the classes involved to contact each member of the class for their approval.

Return postcards could then be sent out to the class members to obtain a sampling of opinion, Riley said. This would have to be carried out through the Alumni Association, he said, as his office

College Group Protests Racial Discrimination

The Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity at Dartmouth College has severed connections with its national fraternity in protest of racial discrimination.

The New York Times reported yesterday the chapter said it protested because "it is incongruous for any organization founded on brotherhood to sanction discrimination on the grounds of race, color, or creed."

Reorganizing on a local basis only, the chapter took the name Phi Tau fraternity at Dartmouth.

"We have been under no compulsion, save that of our own consciences, to take this action," the chapter said. "Our primary allegiance as a college organization is to Dartmouth, and affiliation with the national organization is not necessary for the successful existence of a fraternity on this campus."
