

Committee Considers NSA Reorganization

Under the present committee system, NSA on campus is divided into four committees — state and national affairs, campus, special arrangement, and international affairs.

The national program setup also includes four committees however, with different names. They are national affairs, student affairs, educational affairs, and student government affairs.

Musser said that the campus NSA committee wants to change the committees so that they comply with the national setup. All material received from national, local conferences and the national congress are divided in this way, he said.

Another change recommended is that of holding conferences between the NSA committee and the major campus committees. These include Campus Chest, Orientation Week, Freshman Customs, and Leadership Training.

Within the next year, Musser said, the committee would like to plan four or five conferences, each with a speaker and discussion groups.

With the election of Barbara Hendel as chairman of the Pennsylvania-West Virginia region, the University will now become the regional office.

Miss Hendel was elected to the post at the business meeting of the regional assembly Sunday morning. She is also NSA special arrangements chairman.

Lawrence McCabe was elected vice president of international affairs at the meeting.

Frothy, will act as Honey Dippers or sanitary engineers.

Rules for the game are similar to those used in regular basketball except that team members must be on the back of a donkey when shooting for a basket.

Promoter for the idea of playing basketball on the back of a donkey is the Buckeye Donkey Ball Company which is renting the animals to the University.

The company first began its business in 1934 originally to play softball. Then rubber shoes were developed for the donkeys (to avoid marring gym floors) and basketball was introduced. Last season, for the first time, the company introduced Donkey football to the public.
