

Donkeys --

past Daily Collegian associate editor; and Bruce Lieske, past Association of Independent Men president, made up the CLWDN team.

Members of the faculty team included Richard C. Adams, instructor in mechanical engineering; Elmer A. Gross, instructor in mechanical engineering; Elmer A. Gross, associate professor of physical education; William B. Crafts, assistant to the dean of men; Donald M. Cook, assistant professor of air science; William L. Kjellaard, instructor in agricultural engineering; and Capt. C. W. Dreyer, assistant professor of military science and tactics.

Winning Alpha Team

The winning Alpha fraternity president team included Frank Ramsey, Alpha Gamma Rho; Joseph Palo, Delta Sigma Phi; George Simpson, Kappa Delta Rho; and Alphonse Coune, Beta Theta Pi.

Thomas Falkie, Theta Delta Chi; Arthur Getis, Sigma Alpha Mu; John Harmon, Phi Mu Delta; William Kraft, Pi Kappa Alpha; Donald Brown, Lambda Chi Alpha; Fredrick Fricker, Phi Kappa Tau; William Rohm, Phi Sigma Kappa; and David Barney, Sigma Nu, were on the losing Omega team.

Cafeteria Employees --

in case of a strike, Haas said. But, he added, the students in the dining halls are in favor of the petition and have told him they would not substitute in case of a strike.

Pebbles --

to shake them. The experts are pretty sour these days on a few machines built so heavy the best of players has a hard time pushing and flipping at the same time.

Yes, to be able to shake the machine at the right moments and to win games doing so is the crowning achievement of a pinball player's career. He can be extremely versatile; nudging the ball into an extra 100,000 points, keeping it from rolling in a hole too soon, or even bouncing it back from beyond the exit gate where it is almost surely lost to all but the most talented players.

But why go on? The excitement, the allure, the heady flavor of becoming an expert must surely be too appealing to resist. So drop everything, point your nose towards the nearest field of flickering lights, get out your nickle and . . .

Drinking--

When reached for a statement, James Kerrigan, president of Phi Kappa, said "I feel we were not at fault," but gave no reason why the group did not appeal.

Seng said yesterday that he had accused the two groups of drinking on carnival grounds and that he had seen members of Phi Kappa Sigma with a trash can one-third full of beer bottles, cans and quart bottles. He also reported there were bottle caps lying on the ground.

Personnel experts say the best salesmen are not the best talkers but the best listeners.
