

Employment Service Fits Job to Student

By ANNE FRIEDBERG

Wanted: Four coeds to carry signboards advertising television; a boy to feed experimental mice; a student to watch the furs at the annual furriers' convention.

These are just a few of the job requests received by the Student Employment Service, says John J. Huber, supervisor.

The service was established in 1943 to help locate jobs for students and students for jobs.

Last year, Huber reports, more than 3500 individual job requests were filled, ranging from two-hour baby-sitting stunts to two-semester jobs as table waiters in campus dining halls, fraternity houses, and boarding houses. The requests were filled by 1800 students, 1200 men and 600 women.

The camp and resort division of the employment service provides an additional 1300 summer jobs annually. Huber says that 250 camps and 57 resorts in 19 states have already requested student employes for this summer's season.

Waiting on tables, baby-sitting, and clean-up chores around the home such as window washing and floor scrubbing are routine jobs for many student workers. However, there are numerous unique and different jobs.

One woman, doubting the ability of students to properly swing her axes, requested two boys with their own axes to chop wood for a barbecue. Forestry students, complete with axes, solved her problem.

Ninety-eight per cent of the job requests, exclusive of the camp and resort division, are filled at the Student Employment Service. Huber explained that those that are not filled are usually last-minute requests.

To learn what kind of job the students do, the Service uses appraisal cards. Employers usually are pleased with the work of the students, according to comments on returned cards. Students who are found unsatisfactory are placed on an inactive list and will not receive further employment.

The majority of employers are housewives in the State College, Lemont, and Boalsburg area, according to Huber, although most business establishments also use student help. Seventy-five per cent of the employers are not connected with the University, but several faculty and staff members hire students to assist them either on or off campus.

Huber reports that requests for student employment have seasonal fluctuations. The beginning of the fall and spring semesters see the greatest amount of requests.

Senior Board Of Collegian Promotes Two

Arthur Brener, senior in business administration from Philadelphia, and Ruth Howland, junior in home economics from Seneca Falls, N.Y., have been promoted to the senior board on the business staff of The Daily Collegian.

Brener will replace Delite Hoopes, promotion manager, and Ruth Howland will act as secretary, replacing Lillian Melko.

Elizabeth Beveridge, junior in home economics from Mount Lebanon, Barbara Bertovic, junior in arts and letters from Industry, Jeanette Wyllie, junior in arts and letters from Philadelphia, have been promoted to the sophomore board of the classified staff.

for student jobs. The yearly low comes at Thanksgiving and continues until after finals. The requests tend to be fairly steady from February to June.

Huber has noticed that there is a close relationship between the weather and student employment. As the weather gets nicer, job requests increase.

Students who want part-time employment must file application cards with the service. "We try to help as many students as we can," Huber stated, "but we have to rely on students' initiative to indicate their needs."

Pay rates vary with the jobs. Minimum pay ranges from baby-sitting at 45 to 50 cents an hour to garden and lawn work at $1 an hour. Students' experience and the way they perform determine their wage rate.

64 Students Initiated Into Ag Society
