

2 Groups to Hold Panel Discussion Concerning Russia

A panel discussion on "The New Look of Russia" will be held by the Cosmopolitan Club and the International Fireside of the University from 4 to 6 p.m., Saturday at the Forestry Camp in Stone Valley.

Dr. Robert T. Oliver, professor and head of the department of speech at the University, will serve as chairman. Faculty members concerned with the Russian-area program at the University will participate.

Faculty members participating will be Dr. Vernon V. Aspaturian, assistant professor of political science; Dr. Edward C. Thaden, instructor in history; and Dr. Valav Mares, associate professor of economics.

The discussion is open to the public. Those needing transportation may obtain it after 1 p.m. Saturday at the parking area to the rear of Old Main.

Strike--

University was right about us not being able to strike, and we still felt so strong about the issue that we walked out."

"We feel we gave the University enough time to act on the petition to warrant tonight's actions," Fleisher said.

Fleisher said the students did not know that the same law preventing them from striking provides for the establishment of a grievance panel to air out problems. He said he would try to see Ray T. Fortunato, director of personnel, today to try to set up a panel.

The University spokesman said last night he was not sure whether or not the University would agree to the establishment of a panel now that the students had quit their jobs.

The panel, according to the law, by the Elections Committee, Spadaro said. Spadaro will also present an addition to a proposed Elections Code clause pertaining to the rotation of offices between fraternity and independent men.

Spadaro said since freshman class president and vice president are independent, and sophomore class president is fraternity, the sophomore class vice presidency should rotate between fraternity and independent men. This change would eliminate having three independents and one fraternity man in the top posts every year, he added.

Spadaro Suggests

The final change contested by Spadaro would give Elections Committee final power over choice of party platforms. The committee-approved change says platforms cannot be used unless approved by Elections Committee.

Spadaro said he hadn't had time to word the change he wants to make, but when completed it would give the committee power to ban only those platforms which are "ridiculous." In this manner, he said, the committee would have power to "prevent the bad, but not the good."

Unopposed Changes

Changes which will be presented unopposed to Cabinet will prevent a person from running for office in one party after leaving an office in another party until one year has elapsed since the person held office in the first party, and will hold the entire clique responsible for proper conduct of the clique and its candidates both internally and in campaigns.

Spadaro said he would also propose definitions for the words "extreme" and "spirit" in two code passages to prevent ambiguity in the future. The words appear in the statements "In addition to the monetary fine, the Elections Committee may, in extreme cases, impose a penalty of not less than 10 and not more than 100 votes on each candidate of the offending political party"; and "The Elections Committee reserves the right to act upon any campaign method which it considers it be a violation of the spirit of the elections code."

He added that the present code is too vague as to what penalty can be imposed upon a candidate. In previous years, he said, the committee interpreted the vote penalty clause to mean that no candidate could be fined more than 100 votes apiece.

This year, he said, the committee said they could fine the party and its candidates 100 votes apiece, a total of 200 vote fines for a candidate. Spadaro said he would present a resolution to Cabinet limiting the penalty to a maximum of 100 votes per candidate.
