

AIM Ok's Revisions In Elections Code

The Association of Independent Men last night approved eight amendments to the elections code and voted to include the code in a rewritten constitution to be read next semester.

Four of the amendments concerned revisions in council elections while the remaining four dealt with changes in individual unit elections within councils.

Included in council elections changes were: a change to permit a student to nominate himself for election by presenting a petition signed by 50 or more students and a provision to allow the president and other newly elected officers to take office immediately after elections.

Also included in the council changes was a proviso dealing with impeachment proceedings and provision to provide for the election of a vice president in case the president is forced to resign.

Unit Change Made

Changes in unit elections included a provision to provide for the election of unit presidents, vice presidents, secretaries, treasurers, or secretary-treasurers and a provision allowing only dormitory students not belonging to social fraternities to vote in unit elections.

Other changes included a provision providing that units must have at least 50 per cent members present to hold elections and a provision altering slightly the requirements to hold unit office.

Imerio Matos, Town Independent Men representative at large, proposed a merger of Nittany and Pollock Councils. Matos said that the number of students living in Pollock is not sufficient to warrant representation on AIM.

He also said that the funds allotted to Pollock by AIM, $36.04, were not sufficient to enable council to function adequately.

Amendment Defeated

The amendment was defeated with only Matos voting in favor. Joseph Teomi, Pollock Council president, stated that the council did warrant at least one seat on AIM and that funds allotted by AIM were supplemented by addi-

2. They must establish philosophy and framework for the coming year.
3. They must be "political realists" and analyze and set up strategy.
4. Specific goals must be set.
5. Leaders must have a long range view and think in terms of continuity.

Preston raised the question that, with the growth of enrollment, can the quality of education survive or will institutions turn into factories.

He said that if student government does not justify, then the money can be used for something else. "How can you produce democratic leadership out of an artificial situation?" he asked.

"Society is crying for leadership, but is student government really producing leaders," he continued. If they are not given independence to relate student government to contemporary needs, he said, this role in society cannot be fulfilled.

Harold Dean, AIM social chairman, giving the AIM social report for the year, labeled the social program of AIM a failure and listed several suggestions for improvement.

Phantom Fire Fabricator Fools Frantic Frosh

A jangling fire alarm at 4 a.m. Monday morning sent over 400 Thompson Hall coeds scurrying down the halls and stairways in groggy-eyed surprise.

Location of the fire? Non-existent. Reason for the fire alarm? Unknown.

First floor residents discovered on returning to their rooms that the glass window of the fire box by stairway G had been broken and that the exit G door was ajar. Had someone in the dorm with a touch of spring fever set off the alarm, or more exciting yet, had it been a prank of a male student from nearby Jordan Hall?

Upon further investigation, coeds found that a bulletin board far down the hall had been turned toward the wall. Several of the women who had been up late studying for a bluebook recalled that they had heard footsteps in the hall about 3:55.

The male (?) pranksters seem also to have struck elsewhere. It was reported that a number of screens on women's residence halls were cut during the night and that a fire extinguisher was overturned in one hall.

No one has found the answer yet. Coeds, hostesses, and the dean of women's office are still trying to solve the riddle.

much in knowing people. An institution can reflect the caliber of student leaders, Preston added.

New areas of student leadership may possibly lie, they said, in University policy making, pre-registration for seniors, more effective and extensive orientation programs, more integration between faculty and students, non-segregated community living, and arousing student interest in culture.

Fund Bill --

(Continued from page one) cy reported that the Republican-sponsored tax would yield $275 million by the end of the current two-year fiscal period. This is almost $50 million less than the Republican estimate and $136 million less than Leader's tax proposal.

The bill contains $1 million more than Leader requested in his budget. This increase was tacked on by the Senate appropriations committee.
