pebbles--

chit-chatting is over at midnight, Steve gathers his books, turns his chair away from the dials and delivers a wisecrack to Harry.

Harry does the same and the study session is underway. Perhaps some of the regular visitors who troop in and out of the station also have their books. This makes it more interesting.

These study sessions make the most interesting bull sessions to listen to.

Are you still sitting in your chair over in the corner? You can't say you haven't seen and heard a lot. Of course you don't know what music was played but think of the irate phone calls, the odd strangers, the gabbing Fish-bein friends, the goofs in queing records and reading commercials and news—think of all these and wonder . . .

How come Steve says he will continue broadcasting next year even though he will have graduated in June?

Students Contribute To Diet Experiments

By GINNY PHILIPS

Students at the University are contributing to the advancement of nutrition research by serving as subjects in dietary experiments conducted on campus by the College of Home Economics.

This modern dietary research is being held at Oak Cottage under the direction of Dr. Mary L. Dodds, professor of foods and nutrition, and Dr. Katherine H. Fisher, assistant professor in foods and nutrition.

Students are used only for studies involving normal diets. Their dietary needs are satisfied by all the experiments and no ill effects can result.

Male students and coeds are used separately. The men live at Oak Cottage during the experiments, usually two weeks. As campus regulations forbid coeds to live outside of their residence halls, the girls report to Oak Cottage only for meals and tests. Fifty-five girls and six boys have participated in this project to date.

The other nutrition research work being carried on this year concerns measuring energy obtained from nutrients by the use of a calorimeter.

The calorimeter at the University is the largest in the world. Two men enter it, usually over the weekend, and the energy they use for dressing, eating, sleeping, and all other normal actions is recorded.

This diet and its accompanying tests are particularly rigid and because of this men have been used exclusively.

Subjects are recruited from many sources, including freshman nutrition classes, physical education groups, and from among chemistry and pre-medical students. Students are paid $1 per day for their participation and receive their meals free—a real inducement to men students who live off campus.

The diets are carefully planned and rigidly controlled. The food is weighed, the calories measured, and special standards set for proteins, fats, and other food values.

Any cheating on the rigidly supervised diets? "We are not too hard on a subject who makes an occasional lapse," Dr. Dodds smiled, "but we do ask that any deviations be reported to us immediately, so that data concerning the student may be either revised or dropped from the experiment."

Officers' Names Due

All organizations who have not yet turned in the names of officers to the Hetzel Union desk should do so today, according to George L. Donovan, director of associated student activities.

The names will be published in the Hetzel Union directory, which lists all recognized organizations.
