

Library Very Important in College, Freshmen Will Probably Discover

At first glance, the imposing white edifice at the top of the Mall may overwhelm the incoming freshmen, but in time freshmen will find the Fred Lewis Pattee Library of tremendous importance to their scholastic life at Penn State.

Built in 1938 and extended in 1953, the library now contains 410,000 bound volumes. These are stored in the stacks, which are off-limits to regular students. Only faculty members, graduate students, and students with special permission from their professors or supervisors or superiors may enter the stacks and select their own books.

Assisted by Librarian

Students with special permissions will be accompanied by a librarian. Regular students must make their requests to the librarians, who will in turn find their books for them.

On the first floor to the left is the Reserve Book Room, where most of the books for assigned reading, are located. Books are listed in the notebook at the desk alphabetically by author under the courses for which instructors have had them reserved.

Language records, a small collection of classical records, and records of music from Broadway shows may also be obtained at the Reserve Book Room desk.

Humanities Room Planned

At the back of the first floor are the Open Shelf Rooms. Room 103 contains book collections that are used for required reading. Basic books in education, psychology, physical education, and industrial education are shelved in Room 104. Room 105 is being planned as a Humanities Room with special collections of related materials.

The Card Catalog, located on the second floor, is the index to the books in all the libraries on the campus. Some books may be located in the special libraries and reading rooms maintained in the various colleges.

Books Available for 2 Weeks

The Circulation Desk is located in the northeast room of the second floor next to the card catalog. Books, unless otherwise indicated, are charged out for two weeks with the privilege of renewal if not reserved for another borrower. Periodicals, reference books, rare items, documents, and two special collections (Penn State and Treasure) are restricted to use in the building except by special permission.

The Periodicals Reading Room is the northwest room next to the card catalog. Magazines indexed in Reader's Guide and the Education Index are alphabetically arranged in this area. Current issues of newspapers are in the newspaper reading room on the first floor, to the right.

New York Times Available

Bound copies of the New York Times, 1917 to 1947, are in the stacks and may be used by asking at the Periodicals desk. The library also has the microfilm edition of the New York Times from 1901 to 1916, and from 1948 to date.

On the second floor, south, is the Reference Room. It contains dictionaries, encyclopedias, almanacs, yearbooks, atlases, biographical indexes, and miscellaneous reference books which are to be consulted in the library.

The library is a depository for U.S. Government documents and has a large file of these publications, and almost all of the official Commonwealth of Pennsylvania publications. Many documents are not listed in the card catalog and should be requested at the reference desk.

Films May Be Borrowed

In the basement is located the Audio-Visual Aids library which maintains a loan service on films, film strips, and recordings. The collection consists of more than 4000 prints of over 2500 titles of educational films and numerous recordings.

Clinic --

ulation before a mirror is an easily accomplished method of studying correct mouth and tongue movements.

In group therapy, sometimes prescribed for particular disorders, special social functions such as parties and dances are planned to help the handicapped develop confidence in his newly developed skills.

The University clinic has a staff of three full-time members and two part-time members. Dorsey said that in addition to these, the clinic employs about fifteen graduate students engaged in conducting speech therapy.

He said the clinic has "enjoyed a great deal of success" in rehabilitating persons with speech disorders and has contributed much to the field in the line of research. This research has proved that early recognition and treatment of disorders improves the possibility of a cure, but, he said, "all disorders can be treated with some degree of success if the client desires to avail himself of the opportunity of corrective therapy where it is presented."

Men are born with two eyes, but with one tongue, in order that they might see twice as much as they say.

WMAJ Airs 'Groovology 54'

By THOM SHIELDS

At one time or another almost every Penn State student has listened to "Groovology 54" a local radio show which originates from station WMAJ.

From the show's opening theme, "Curtain Time," to its closing "Land of Dreams" WMAJ's doors are usually open to visitors. The control room from where the show originates is well at the rear of the station, behind several offices and an auxiliary studio.

The show begins at 10 p.m. and lasts until 1 p.m., during which time an average of 45 records are played. Sports, news, and weather are also included at regular intervals.

Ballads Liked Most

Over the years disc jockey Steve Fishbein, generally known as the "Old Professor," popular ballads are best received by Penn State students. Show tunes are second with jazz running a close third. In the jazz field Dixieland enthusiasts are more numerous than those who favor modern or progressive jazz.

In a survey concerning Rock and Roll, Fishbein, a former student at the University, found that more students seem to like it than don't, possibly because they are more fanatic. One rabid fan sent in six votes for R&R addressed to former "Old Professor," Dan Grove.

Given 'Hard Time'

Fishbein admits the R&R enthusiasts give him a "hard time," but says "Rock and Roll is definitely a fly-by-night thing. A R&R hit soon dies—and when it does it is gone forever. Other tunes can become standards or old favorites, but not Rock and Roll."

Aside from the Rock and Roll fanatics, Fishbein's headches stem from sports enthusiasts who constantly phone in for sports results immediately after he has announced them. Many times people ask for scores before the game even starts.

Student announcers preceding Fishbein have been Dan Grove, Roger Clinton, and George Kahl. Oddly enough, most have not gone into radio, after leaving WMAJ. Fishbein intends to stay on at WMAJ "until Rock and Roll is successfully conquered"—or the Army drafts him.
