Eng Council To Sponsor Stage Show

The Engineering Student Council in cooperation with the West Penn Power Company will sponsor a presentation of the internationally-famous "House of Magic" science show at 8 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab Auditorium.

The stage show, which is open to the public, will demonstrate interesting and entertaining marvels of science developed in the laboratories of the General Electric Company.

Samples of Research

The show does not deal in sleight-of-hand; rather, it takes samplings of research which seem to be magic, and strips them of their mystery. Each demonstration has been carefully tailored to give a simple, easily understandable explanation of a scientific fact.

Constant attention is given to see that the show presents the latest and most outstanding research developments. Some hundreds of scientists who work in the company's laboratories are constantly engaged in trying to uncover the secrets of nature.

Illustrate Potential Use

The researchers most significant findings are illustrated in the show. Illustrations of their present and potential uses are given.

Since its inception, the "House of Magic" show has appeared throughout the United States and Canada and in all major countries in Central and South America.
