

Housing to Place Closer Check on Solicitors' Ban

By ANNE FRIEDBERG

Stricter enforcement of an unpublicized University regulation that prohibits soliciting, advertising, or vending on the part of outsiders on University property, is being planned by Otto Mueller, director of housing.

The action is particularly aimed to eliminate food vendors from delivering to women's dormitories where the problem is more pressing than in the men's dormitories, because of the regulation of hours, Mueller said.

Ed Council Provides for Alternates

The Education Student Council added a by-law to its constitution Tuesday night which makes a provision for alternates to attend meetings in the place of members who are unable to attend or are away student teaching.

Katherine Dickson, vice president made the motion, which states that students defeated in the council election last Spring be asked to serve as alternates for members who are unable to attend or are student teaching.

Votes Considered

The students will be asked to serve in order of the number of votes they received.

Nancy Scholl, senior from Glenshaw, then made a motion that a council member with two unexcused absences who failed to get an alternate to take his place be dropped and replaced by the person in his class running for council last spring with the highest number of votes among those who were defeated.

Chairmen Appointed

The remainder of the business was concerned with appointing committee chairmen for yearly projects. Those appointed were Virginia Leary, chairman of elections committee; Joyce Koch, chairman of the outstanding senior award committee, Ruth Johnson and Jeanne O'Conner, co-chairmen of the outstanding senior banquet committee; and Sandra Reimer and Myrna Paynter, co-chairmen of the coffee hours committee.

Members will hear a report on the National Student Government Association Convention and discussion on founding a local chapter of Kappa Delta Epsilon, women's professional education fraternity, at the next meeting at 7:30 Oct. 9 in 214 Hetzel Union.

WSGA Senate Approves Date For Interviews

The Women's Student Government Association Senate last night set Oct. 6 as the day that women will be interviewed for WSGA committees by the screening board.

All women without a major judicial record may sign up for the interview starting today and extending until Oct. 5. Committees on scholarship, necessity counters for the dormitories, WSGA publicity, and student enforcement will be selected.

The Senate decided to look into the possibility of having television sets for dormitory lounges. A committee on this problem will also be set up.

The Junior-Senior Faculty Reception will be held in the Hetzel Union lounge on Dec. 5. In the past, the reception has always been held in Simmons lounge.

The tea is an annual WSGA project.

Senate voted a money appropriation to the town and co-op delegates to the WSGA House of Representatives. One dollar is required for meals in the dormitories before each meeting.

Holderman Picked To Head Committee

Kenneth L. Holderman, assistant dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University, has been appointed chairman of the project committee to study technical education of the Technical Institute Division of the American Society for Engineering Education.

The survey is supported by a grant of $38,000 from the Carnegie Corporation.

Field surveys have been planned throughout the country to determine the potential need for trained engineering technicians and the present capacity of the technical institutes to train them.

is more pressing than in the men's dormitories, because of the regulation of hours, Mueller said.

Mueller said that for three years the University maintained an exclusive delivery service with Sally's, but the agreement was terminated last year for several reasons.

Service Too Expensive

Mueller said one reason the service was ended was because prices were more expensive than the same accommodations through the University Food Service. Another reason he gave is random soliciting on the part of vendors which was bothersome to numerous students, and thirdly, he said that some students brought pressure to have the service ended.

Mueller maintained that the responsibility for food service is the University's and it should not come from the outside. He said that many students who blamed food sickness to University facilities were actually ill because of food obtained off-campus.

Check Can Be Kept

He explained that by prohibiting the vendors from entering the dormitories, a more careful check can be kept on what students eat and the origination point if food sickness results.

He added that vendors may invade the privacy of other students who are studying and who do not want food.

Vendors Annoying

"The vendors turn into a source of annoyance to more people than they satisfy," Mueller contended.

He explained that the departments of housing and food service are not trying to deny students "snacks between meals." It is for this reason that provisions were made for a snack bar in the Hetzel Union Building, and automatic machines were installed in the snack bar of Waring Hall, and in the dormitories.

Machines Supply Food

Food that can be obtained from the automatic vending machines in most of the dormitories include
