Discussion On Politics To Be Held

William Lee Miller, staff reporter for The Reporter, a current-events magazine, will lead a discussion entitled "The Danger of Oversimplifying Politics" at 7 tonight in the Memorial Lounge of the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel.

The Public Affairs Institute, sponsored by the University Christian Association with the purpose of bringing students into a more responsible role in politics and current events, is presenting the discussion and two similar events on Saturday.

The series is entitled "This Election and You."

Miller will speak at 2 p.m. tomorrow on "A Responsible Approach to Politics." At 7 p.m. tomorrow the topic will be "What Can a Student Do in This Election." The evening meetings have been planned to last approximately one hour.

Miller, a graduate of the University of Nebraska and of the Yale University Divinity School, has served as National Chairman of the Student Young Men's Christian Association.

At Yale, he specialized in the study of the hearing of Christian ethics upon the fields of politics and economics.

He taught for two years at the Yale Divinity School and for two years at Smith College. He is currently on leave of absence from The Reporter.

R'n'R King's Military Garb Doesn't Jive

The inside story on Elvis Presley versus the military has broken wide open.

A picture of Tennessee's noisiest hillbilly was unearthed, showing Elvis in a uniform. The picture appropriately found its way to the Army bulletin board in Carnegie Hall.

The opinion of experienced ROTC students was that Elvis was not cut out for the military. The Army men found numerous faults, real or imagined, in his appearance.

A non-regulation haircut was first to be criticized. Apparently the Army does not condone the wearing of "D.A." hairdos while in uniform.

The picture further revealed that Elvis had forgotten to wear his necktie for the photographer. Such oversights invariably collect demerits from unsympathetic officers.

In the picture one could not tell, but the ROTC students handed out demerits liberally on the assumption that the gyrating musician was wearing his blue suede shoes. Colorful, perhaps, but a bit impractical for ten-mile hikes.

At last count, Presley had collected more than 2000 demerits.

hours of the Lion's Den should coincide with the closing hours of the HUB.

This semester the Lion's Den closes at 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 10:45 p.m. weekends.

Student Forced Downtown
Last semester the Lion's Den closed at 10:45 p.m. Monday through Thursday and at 11:30 p.m. weekends.

Leach said many students making use of other parts of the HUB after the Lion's Den closes desire a light snack before going home.

These students are forced to make use of State College restaurants or else go home hungry, he said.

Not Enough Patrons
Mildred Baker, HUB food service director, said yesterday that the hours of the Lion's Den were changed because food service felt the number of students using the Lion's Den at later hours was insufficient to pay operating costs. Food service has no other desire than to serve the students, she said.

Survey Taken
However, Lash Howes, AIM president, reported a personal survey taken last weekend revealed a greater number of students present in the Lion's Den at closing time than one hour before.

Commenting on the results of the survey which appeared in an editorial in "Collegian" yesterday, Miss Baker said AIM had no way of estimating the number of patrons required to maintain operating costs in the Lion's Den.

"Right now," she said, "food service has no plans to revert hours in the Lion's Den to those of last semester."
