

IFC Parking Ban Petition To Go to Borough Council

Petitions asking the removal of the 2 to 6 a.m. parking ban scheduled to go into effect in the fraternity area Nov. 1 will be presented to Borough Council at its Tuesday night meeting.

'Herblock' Will Appear In Collegian

The Daily Collegian, which plans to give its readers the best political coverage possible, will carry the political cartoons of Herbert A. Block, nationally-known cartoonist for The Washington Post and Times Herald, beginning next week.

Hall Syndicate, which distributes Block's cartoons, has informed Collegian that the first cartoon may arrive in time for Tuesday's publication.

Block, who signs his cartoons, "Herblock," is recognized as one of the nation's top political cartoonists. He has also been praised for his several books.

He was chosen by the Collegian senior board members because they felt him to be one of the nation's most impartial cartoonists.

This is just one of the "new looks" in The Daily Collegian planned for this election year.

Collegian will begin a special series of "showcase features" Monday.

These will be interviews with members of the department of political science and other departments for their views on the upcoming elections.

Two of Collegian's top reporters have been assigned to interview the faculty members.

Angel Flight Applications Due at HUB Monday

Applications for Angel Flight should be returned to the Hetzel Union desk by noon Monday.

Sophomore and junior women with an All-University or semester average of at least 2.3 are eligible. However, transfer students with a 2.0 All-University average may apply.

Applications may be obtained at the HUB desk.

Blue Band Goes to Army Game

TWO BLUE BAND members, Donald Scutt, and James Weiser, board one of the buses taking the band to West Point, N.Y., where it will play for the Penn State-Army game.

Clear Skies; Mild Today

Made-to-order weather is scheduled for University Park today.

The University weather station predicts clear skies and mild temperatures in the 70-75 range for this afternoon.

The early morning is expected to be near freezing.

But the usually unstable University barometer will fall early Sunday, warning of a rainy Sunday night and Monday morning.

Today's blue skies were an obvious change from yesterday, although it was a bit brisk. The high today was 64 and the low 48.

Party Meetings Set Tomorrow

The University's two political parties will swing into action tomorrow as they set up the machinery for the coming fall elections.

Both parties will hold series of nominations at general party meetings open to the public. Lion party will meet at 7 p.m. in 10 Sparks, while Campus party has scheduled a meeting for the same time in 121 Sparks.

Party membership cards will be distributed by the All-University Elections Committee.

Nominations for freshman and sophomore class officers, and class clique officers in the party will constitute the major job at the Lion party meeting.

Although the Campus party has postponed freshman and sophomore class officer nominations to a later meeting, the party will open nominations for class clique officers.

Concert Association Gets 1230 Quota; Closes Campaign

The membership campaign of the State College Concert Association closed at 5 p.m. yesterday when the 1,230 quota, determined by the seating capacity in Schwab Auditorium, was reached.

Student membership in the Association reached a new high this year, according to David McKinley, president of the Association. No figures were made available.

McKinley also said that many sorority, fraternity, and independent groups bought blocks of memberships with the plan to rotate the tickets for the individual numbers among members of the groups. This, as well as a general increase in student interest, greatly boosted student participation, he said.

One or two additional concerts will be added to the series for the 1956-57 season. The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, the Westminster Choir, and Eileen Farrell, soprano, have already been booked.

AIM Board Approves 3 Car Grants

An Association of Independent Men freshmen car screening board Thursday night recommended that three freshmen be permitted to operate cars on campus.

Robert Seyler, chairman, said the board recommended the three cases for reasons of hardship and emergency.

Two of the cases involve students whose fathers have heart conditions. The third involves a student needed weekends at home for farm work.

The board reviewed three other cases but did not recommend them. These cases, Seyler said, were students desiring personal cars on campus.

Seyler said he discussed the three cases recommended by the board with Frank J. Simes, dean of men, yesterday. He also submitted a written report to Simes.

Recommendations of the board are subject to final approval by the dean of men's office.

Students submitting letters who have not heard from the board will be contacted early next week, Seyler said.

Students who desire to be interviewed by the board may submit letters at the Hetzel Union information desk, stating reasons for needing cars.

The board will meet again from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday in 217 Hetzel Union. Eight interviews are scheduled.

Leadership Course Registration Begins

Registration for the eight-week Leadership Training Program will begin Monday at the Hetzel Union desk.

The program, which will begin Oct. 17, is open primarily to freshmen although upperclass students may also register.

The course includes instruction in parliamentary procedure, the role of a student leader, committee organization, public relations, and activities planning.

The Business Administration Student Council will meet at 6:45 p.m. Monday in 219 Hetzel Union.

Coeds Don Air Force Blue

University students have seen a variety of coed fashions through the years, from bustles to Bermuda shorts.

A new dress style this fall is the Air Force Blues. Women enrolled in the WAF Cadette program will wear regulation WAF uniforms matching those worn by the AFROTC. Unlike the uniforms for male officers, the blouse and gored skirt outfits for women will not have braid on the sleeves.

The University is one of ten large schools where the program is starting this year. Others are the universities of Maryland, Florida, Texas, Omaha, UCLA, George Washington, Butler, Miami of Ohio, and Southern Illinois University.

The experiment will determine whether the Air Force can produce sufficiently qualified female officers to maintain its peacetime quota of about 1000. There are now about 500 women officers.

Credits Awarded According to Lt. Renee Rubin, adviser for the program, coeds will receive one and a half credits a semester during basic training in their freshman and sophomore years and three credits a semester in advanced training during their junior and senior years. The credits will count toward graduation requirements.

An officer's qualification test and a physical examination must be passed to enroll in the advanced course. Personality and intelligence are considered.

Twelve women have registered for the course. They attend classes with the men and can participate in activities such as the AFROTC band and choral group. During the common hour they have a leadership laboratory and learn military customs, drill, and ceremonies.

Lt. Rubin, the only WAF officer on campus, said approximately 50 women have inquired about the program. It is now open to all interested women who are qualified, but a quota will probably be established in a few years.

Capt. Nathaniel Holman, who has women in his classes, said a somewhat different approach is used in instruction.

Reaction 'Skeptical' "Girls in the junior class have missed the first two years of training and so do not have as much background as the boys," he said. He added that there has been a "skeptical" reaction about the program among the men in the classes.

Upon receiving her commission as a second lieutenant after completing the advanced course, a woman serves three years active duty with the opportunity of being stationed at any USAF base in the world or at an international headquarters like NATO.
