An estimated 12,000 automobiles will be on campus before and after game time.

According to Captain Philip A. Mark, head of the Campus Patrol, there will be 65 patrolmen guarding the fence area and parking cars where no guide lines are available.

Additional parking space has been made ready for use east of the new water tower along Park avenue and on the practice fields of the golf course.

5000 to See 43rd Annual Hort Show

More than 5000 persons are expected to attend the 43rd annual Horticulture Show starting at 9 a.m. today in the livestock pavilion.

The show will run from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. tomorrow.

"Garden Fantasy" is the theme of this year's show. The livestock pavilion is laid out as a dream garden, with a small pond surrounded by trees, flowers, and shrubbery.

Grass Carpet
On the floor of the pavilion will be a grass carpet, made of strips of sod wired together.

Shrubbery, trees, and flowers extend from the floor up the oval around the pavilion to form a hanging garden.

More than 40 pine and spruce trees, and several maple and oak trees are lined about the pavilion.

Rhododendron and hemlock hedges separate the undergrowth on the floor from the hanging garden.

Flowers forced to bloom at this time of year will be interspersed throughout the garden. Some of them had to be started last May to get them ready for blooming together at an unnatural time.

Dedicated to Seely
The fantasy garden was designed by Delbert Ellis, senior landscaping student.

The show is dedicated to Dr. John Seely, former professor of floriculture, who is now at Cornell University.

Down" and taking part in various children's games.

Dixieland fans will enjoy listening to the Dixieland jazz band on the old fashioned phonograph. While the turntable revolves strains of "The Saints Go Marching In" will be heard.

Of course we can't forget the old community band in the park. A potpourri of four or five old standards will be played as the audience, the larger part of the band gradually joins in.

Military Band
Blue Band will then go into a regular march formation to give their version of the military band. To a cadence of 120 they will march down the field to "Semper Fidelis."

The 1956 edition of the Penn State Blue Band will conclude the half-time performance. Blue Band won a pat on the back from the Secretary of the Army and the Commandant of Cadets at West Point.

Band Called 'Magnificent'
In his letter to James W. Dunlop, director of Blue Band, Secretary Wilbur M. Brucker called the half-time show at the Army game "magnificent in all respects." In commanding the bandmen, the Secretary said "your work reflects great credit upon your fine University."

Brig. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, commandant of cadets, said in a second letter "the skit your band presented during halftime was one of the most entertaining and skillfully done band presentations we have ever had the pleasure to watch in Michie Stadium."

The show, which was prepared by Hummel Fishburn, with musical and marching assistance from Dunlop, pictured "A Day in the Life of a Cadet at the U.S. Military Academy."

Review--

His performance was reminiscent of a high school production.

In the role of Madame Parole, the colony's conniving busybody, Patricia Doll, does an excellent job. Robert Shiarella's role of the Lieutenant is small, but well executed.

The sets for the production were excellent as Players' sets go. The background music contrived by Kelly Yeaton was noteworthy. However, the actor's make-up was in many instances sub-standard and obvious.

The comedy provides fast moving and laugh-a-minute entertainment. Even the rough spots detract little from the rollicking humor of the plot and dialogue.

"My Three Angels" manages to make life in a penal colony look mighty inviting and a seat at Center Stage quite enjoyable.

don't miss the Player's production
