

Procedures of DIR Outlined by Wilson

Students having difficulty with required or elected courses they are enrolled in this semester may still drop them by going into the Division of Intermediate Registration.

Harold K. Wilson, director of DIR, said a student may drop a course for reasons of curriculum misplacement, but may not transfer to any other college from DIR where that course is required for graduation.

Flight Program To Be Offered By University

The University has been selected to participate in an Army flight training program for 400 senior cadets.

The new flight training program, which will be added to the regular Reserve Officers Training Corps course, will consist of 35 hours of ground instruction and 35 hours of light plane training.

No Expense to Student
The program will be conducted on an extra-curricular basis at no expense to the student by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. Successful completion of the flight course will qualify the ROTC member for a private pilot's license.

Volunteers for the flight training program must be enrolled in the fourth year of ROTC, be eligible for graduation during the senior academic year, pass a physical examination and flight aptitude test and agree to serve three years of active duty and to volunteer for Army Aviation flight training and assignment.

Surveys Select Schools
The schools selected for starting the flight training program have been determined by surveys which ascertained the closeness of the school to civilian light aircraft training facilities, sufficient student output, and the interest and capability of the school to include the training in its current curriculum.

In the early 90's one of the students at the University paid a good part of his expenses by acting as a barber for the boys. His shop was on the fourth floor of Old Main.

When a student transfers out of a college into DIR he can not transfer immediately into another college regardless of his All-University average, but must remain in DIR for at least one semester.

Parents' Signature Required
Any student under 21 who wants to transfer to DIR voluntarily and thereby change his major, must have his parents' signature, Wilson said.

Once the student transfers to DIR he will receive specialized counseling service from one of the staff members, all of whom are especially trained in counseling and guidance work.

If the student does not know what course he would like to enter when he leaves DIR, he is given the opportunity to talk with deans in the various colleges of the University. He may also be advised to sample courses in liberal arts or in several colleges for his semester in DIR to find out where his abilities lie.

Wilson Makes Suggestions
Wilson suggested that students having difficulty finding out what they should choose for a major, start their investigation by considering what they like to do most, rather than by considering what salary or prestige value they would receive. He explained that they had a better chance of achieving the most benefits possible by following the dictates of their talents.

Although most of the students taken into DIR in the fall semester have been referred there by the dean of admissions, the committee on academic standards, or the dean of their college because of low academic standards, Wilson said that past surveys have shown by the end of the semester about 50 per cent of the students in the division will be enrolled on a voluntary basis.

Senior Men to Hear Navy Procurement Talk

An information team from the local office of Naval Officer Procurement will visit the campus on Nov. 13, 14, and 15 to talk with senior men who may be interested in serving as commissioned officers in the Navy following graduation. The Navy personnel will be situated from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the ground floor of the Hetzel Union Building.

In addition to the Officer Candidate (OCS) program which has been available since 1950, a new flight training program, the Aviation Officer Candidate (AOC) program, is available for qualified graduates.
