What will undoubtedly be the roughest home contest of the year for the Lion football team takes place this afternoon at 1:30 (EDT) when the West Virginia Mountaineers try to knock some of the luster off the Lions before 30,000 fans on Beaver Field.

'Big Week' Bluebooks Questioned

The Intercollegiate Council Board voted Thursday night to ask the deans and faculty of the nine colleges to avoid scheduling blue books during Spring Week.

The board decided that such a plan would be more fair to both students and professors. If no blue books were given during Spring Week, students would not be taking tests without preparing for them adequately, the council felt.

"We realize that we're here for an education and not for Spring Week activities," Donald Patterson, ICCB president, said. "But it's a generally accepted fact that studying is cut to a minimum that week. Grades given then aren't a fair indication of what a student knows."

The board authorized each council president to present the plan to the dean of his college. However, no president will be compelled to do this if he opposes the plan. At the time of the board meeting, no president flatly refused to submit the plan for faculty consideration.

Requests will be made soon, Patterson said, before departments make up course schedules for the spring semester.

Rain Expected During Game

Following the trend of everyone giving opinions on football games, the weatherman has come out with his prediction for today's Lion-West Virginia game. It's going to be a wet afternoon, according to the University weather station.

The rains are expected to begin early in the morning. Breezy, southerly winds are expected to shift to westerlies during the day, with light showers called for this afternoon.

The best news the weatherman could give football fans was that the afternoon rainfall may only be a light one. The high today is forecast to be between 60 and 65 degrees.

A cold front is expected in the area Sunday morning.

Lion-WVU Tickets Available Today

Less than 1500 tickets for the West Virginia game will go on sale at 9 a.m. today at the Beaver Field ticket booths.

The tickets are mainly in the temporary bleacher section at the south end of the gridiron with some in the lower east stands. Seats cost $3.50 each.

Fifty tickets remain for the Syracuse away game, Nov. 3.

Agriculture Magazine Available on Tuesday

The November issue of the Penn State Farmer, Forester and Scientist will be available to agriculture students Tuesday at their departmental offices.

This new plan of issuing the Farmer will replace the old method of placing them in the lobbies of the Ag Hill buildings.

7-6, are six-point favorites to make the Mounties their fourth victim of the season. In four games thus far the Lions have beaten Penn, Holy Cross, and Ohio State, and have lost to Army.

The Mountaineers, meanwhile, have won three and lost two. The two losses coming at the hands of Pittsburgh and Syracuse, opponents of the Lions, too. Mount-tie wins were scored over Richmond, Texas, and William & Mary.

In the long series between the Lions and Mountaineers the Lions hold a 14-7 edge, although losing the last three games to the boys from Morgantown.

Lion-West Virginia games have been traditionally thrillers and today's contest will not be different. Both teams pack potent offenses and strong defensive lines. In their four games the Lions have scored 91 points while holding the opposition to 20. West Virginia has tallied 90 points but has allowed 66 points.

The Lions' well-balanced offense will be spearheaded by quarterback Milt Plum, who Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes called "the best quarterback I've seen around in sometime."

The Lions' defensive unit is headed by captain Sam Valentine, whose amazing performances at the guard position have drawn raves all over the East. Both Valentine and Plum were named to the All-East team this week for their outstanding play against the Buckeyes.

The Mountaineers run behind the flashy Mickey Trimarki at quarterback, who is regarded as a top-notch passer and ball handler. The line has tackle Bill Underdonk as its sparkplug, backed up by Chuck Howley at center.

Underdonk is rated by coach Art Lewis as being better than Bruce Bosley and Sam Huff, both of whom were mentioned on many All-America teams last year. (Continued on page eight)

WH Students Foil Lion-Painting Try

A car load of West Virginia University students reportedly attempted to give the Nittany Lion statue a paint job early today.

West Halls students rushed to the scene and foiled the attempt, a student said.

One of the WVU students was reportedly captured and was said to have gotten his hair shaved.

Attempts to paint the Lion statue are made about two or three times each football season, with the University of Pittsburgh probably the biggest offender.

Hungarian Revolt Spreads to Austria

VIENNA, Saturday, Oct. 27 (P)—Budapest's anti-Red revolution blazed across western Hungary today to the borders of Austria on a widening panorama of reeking war and death.

Anti-Red Hungarians also were reported gaining against Soviet-led armed force in south Hungary. Casualties mounted into many uncounted thousands.

Emergency Parking To Begin Thursday

Both fraternity and town independent men may park on the old vegetable gardens behind the Agricultural Engineering Building beginning Thursday, under a temporary parking plan announced yesterday by the University.

Attempts will be made through the Borough Council, the Interfraternity Council, and the Association of Independent Men to locate off-street parking downtown for students who park at the temporary site.

EMERGENCY PARKING for students driven from all-night parking on borough streets will be provided from Nov. 1 until Thanksgiving recess on the former vegetable plot area south of Park Avenue, between Area 72 and Area 73.

Educator Says College Aura Promotes Student Instability

Colleges contribute to student's mental instability by providing an atmosphere in which traditional beliefs are questioned but are never put in their place, an educator believes.

Dr. William S. Carlson, president of the State University of New York, believes "the very atmosphere of the university tends to corrode the average student's traditional moral and religious beliefs" and that little is being done about this new disturbing element in his life, according to the New York Times.

Colleges Termed Unhelpful
"To the extent that colleges take no steps to fill the vacuum of belief which they create, he said, they are contributing to the sum total of mental instability."

Carlson said schools do intentionally create an atmosphere "unconducive to religious growth." "If the university is culpable, it is on the grounds of omission, rather than commission," he said.

"The universities have not gone out of their way either to praise or condemn religion; they simply have—for the most part—ignored it altogether," he said.

Religion, Science Conflict
Carlson stressed that most young persons' problems arise because they attempt to reconcile religion learned as a child with the science that, as young adults, they now confront.

He said the university has the responsibility of giving the student an equal opportunity to understand religion and science.

The vegetable plots will be available until the Thanksgiving vacation to students who cannot find other parking facilities before the borough's 2 to 6 a.m. parking ban goes into effect Thursday in the fraternity area, according to Walter H. Wiegand, director of the physical plant.

However, Wiegand said, students must move their cars from the gardens by 10 a.m. Nov. 10 and Nov. 17 so that parking will be available for visitors to the Boston University and North Carolina State football games.

Students must report to the Campus Patrol office to apply for a special permit for the area within two days after they have moved their cars to the plots. Each student applying for a permit will fill out a questionnaire, copies of which will be sent to the borough and to either the Interfraternity Council or the Association of Independent Men in an effort to locate downtown parking for the student.

Plan Excludes Lots
Wiegand said the emergency parking area does not include established parking lots 72 and 73, but that students may enter the gardens through lot 72. Spaces in lots 72 and 73 are assigned for regular campus parking, he said.

Men's dormitories will be constructed on the emergency parking site in the near future, Wiegand said. The plots have been rolled, but are not paved, and they are expected to become muddy in wet weather, according to the University.

Ban Begins
The borough's overnight parking ban will go into effect Thursday in the area between Allen street, Beaver Avenue, High street, and Irvin Avenue.

The ban is now in effect throughout most of the remainder of the borough, but enforcement was postponed in the fraternity area to give students a chance to find off-street parking facilities.

Students will receive what will probably be a much-needed extra hour of sleep this weekend as University Park and State College revert to Eastern Standard Time.

Standard time will go into effect at 2 a.m. tomorrow when clocks will be turned back one hour. Much confusion has resulted in the past month because many surrounding communities, including Bellefonte, returned to Standard Time on Sept. 30.

Local clergymen tomorrow can expect to have a number of early arrivals for church services due to those who will probably forget to change their clocks to Standard Time.
