

Behind the Parking Ban

Students Cite Alternative For 'Unnecessary' Ban

Second in a Series

Traffic conditions do not warrant banning overnight parking on both sides of borough streets, according to Daniel Land, Interfraternity Council president, and Lash Howes, Association of Independent Men president.

In explaining their stand on the borough's 2 to 6 a.m. parking ban, Land and Howes said yesterday they believe it would place an unnecessary burden on students. The ban is scheduled to go into effect in the fraternity area tomorrow.

Land said he believes the time allotted for students to comply with the ban is insufficient. He said that parking lots have not yet been developed to adequately handle the cars which would be taken off the streets. The lots probably cannot be so developed within the next three weeks, he said.

Emergency Parking to End
By that time, the emergency parking on the old vegetable gardens behind the Agricultural Engineering building will have terminated, according to the plan approved by the University.

Land said he believes all the streets in the fraternity area, except Locust lane, are wide enough to permit parking on one side. The volume of traffic is not sufficient to create a serious problem and the ban's effectiveness would be limited to late evening and early morning hours, he said.

Land said that, while some action was necessary to get fraternities to attempt to improve their off-street parking facilities, they have done so, in the light of the ban, as much as they can.

Both students agreed that the ban does not solve the borough's parking problem.

Must Accept Problems
Howes suggested the borough permit one-side parking, but alternate it each day from one side of the street to the other.

He expressed the view that parking problems are caused by University students, but that the borough residents must accept the problems students bring to the town, as well as the business they create.

He said he believes the student body represents a significant segment of the population and that their interests are being disregarded when students must buy parking space. Many students have a car as their only luxury, and have barely enough money otherwise to get through school, he said.

Solved by Other Towns
Land said he has seen 50,000-population traffic problems in the borough is reputed to have in many other towns, and that these problems have been solved without prohibiting parking on the streets.

Howes said additional problems arise in the cases of independent men living in town. Whereas the number of cars at fraternities may easily be determined, it is difficult to tell how many of the independents have cars.
