

Tennis Courts to Be Built In East Campus Area

By CHUCK DIROCCO

A new tennis court area will be built at the west corner of Pollock and Entrance roads on the southeast end of the Jordan Fertility Plot, according to a spokesman from the Physical Plant.

When fully completed, the site will contain eight tennis courts similar to those next to Beaver Field. Provisions will be made so that expansion in the future will be possible.

The courts will provide additional recreational means for students living on the eastern end of campus.

Courts Ready by 1957

The spokesman said the courts will be ready for use by the beginning of the fall semester, 1957. He said subgrading and grading will commence sometime this fall and actual construction will begin in the spring.

"Speed seems to be the pass word of the construction crew working on the new five-unit girls' dormitories at Shortlidge road and College avenue.

The Lift-Slab Company, which employs a new construction method of raising floors by use of large hydraulic jacks, arrived early this week to begin the preliminary stages necessary before commencing the "lift-slab method."

Unit Ready in 1958

The unit will be ready for occupancy for the Fall semester, 1958, according to authorities.

At the extreme east end of campus along Entrance road, the Home Management buildings are waiting for final landscaping work before the project can be labeled "fully completed."

Workmen can still be seen laboring on the Halls of the Americas classroom building located on Pollock road just opposite of the Hetzel Union building.

Efforts are being made to have the classroom building ready for use in time for the Spring semester.

All over campus workmen from the physical plant can be found busily raking leaves before the winter's snowfalls begin.

Students had to rise at 5 p.m., could not cut classes, had to put in three hours a day of labor on the farm, and were allowed no horseplay in the dormitories.

Senate Creates Two Standing Policy Groups

The University Senate created two new standing committees at its meeting Thursday afternoon, according to C. O. Williams, director of admissions and registrar.

The committees, on research policy and extension policy, will act as liaisons between the faculty members in these areas and the administration.

Williams said they will provide an opportunity for the entire faculty to better understand and be heard with reference to extension and research.

Spencer to Head Extension Group

He explained that President Eric A. Walker was interested in the committees because he wanted to improve the channels of communication all the way from the board of trustees down through the administration and faculty.

Oscar F. Spencer, director of extension, will head the Extension Policy Committee. The chairman of the Research Policy Committee has not been named.

The committees also will be composed of a representative from each college and from the graduate school.

Panhel Greek Week Applications Available

Applications for Panhellenic Council Greek Week committees will be available noon Monday at the Hetzel Union desk.

Applications should be filled out and turned in at the Inter-Fraternity Council Panhel office, 20, Hetzel Union, before Nov. 18.

Young GOPs, Dems Display Drive, Zeal

By RUTH GROSSMAN

The Young Republican and Young Democratic Clubs have been working furiously in the past two months to promote their party candidates on campus and in Centre County.

Working with the senior town committees, both groups are carrying on an extensive phone campaign contacting registered voters to their respective parties and encouraging them to vote.

The Young Republicans and the Young Democrats also conduct door-to-door literature campaigns in State College.

In connection with their literature campaign the Young Democrats helped to publicize a political rally sponsored by the Democratic town committee.

At the Young Republican Headquarters on 119 S. Pugh St., club members are on hand to distribute literature and campaign buttons. They also handle the problems of individual voters. Frequently they are asked to explain the procedure for absentee voting to the out-of-town voters.

The Young Democrats worked in conjunction with the town committee on a "Dollars for Democrats" drive on Oct. 16 and 17. The drive was nation-wide on these days and over $500 was collected in State College.

On election day, Tuesday, the club members will go into the precincts and contact persons who have not yet voted. They often provide transportation or act as baby sitters in order for these people to get down to the polls.

The Young Republicans claim a record of 10 to 12 per cent higher voting average in the precincts where they have worked.

Both clubs meet once a week. At these meetings prominent speakers, often the party candidates, explain the policy of the national party to the club members.

The Young Democrats conducted a membership drive last month. According to Donald Smaltz, the president of the club, they have tripled membership since last year.

An attempt was made to schedule a campus debate between Democrat Joseph Clark and Republican James H. Duff, senatorial candidates. However, it was impossible to find a date suitable to both candidates and so the debate did not take place.

What's This?

CLUE: There's only one of these on campus now, but according to some administrative personnel, there may be more. Answer on page eight.
