

'Chest' Donations to Aid In Heart Disease Fight

(This is the fourth of a series of articles explaining the works of the organizations benefiting from Campus Chest donations.)

The five organizations that were selected to receive funds during this year's Campus Chest solicitations campaign were chosen with the idea in mind that they were the organizations that would ultimately affect more University students over the years than other agencies.

One of these agencies is the American Heart Association. Statistics received from the Association seem to point to the fact that more students will eventually be affected by heart disease than some other associations which received funds in previous campaigns.

Many Stricken
For example, in the United States approximately 10 million persons, or 1 out of every 16, suffer from some form of heart or circulatory disease, including 500,000 children of school age.

In 1955, heart and circulatory diseases were responsible for 810,200 deaths, or approximately 53 per cent of all deaths at all ages. This surpasses the sum total of the next five leading killers including cancer, 242,430; accidents, 91,270; pneumonia, 45,140; diabetes, 25,000; and hardening of the liver, 17,710.

Funds Stay in Town
The major portion of funds raised during this campaign for the American Heart Association will remain in State College to support the programs of the local and state heart associations.

The American Heart Association sponsors a three-fold attack against heart diseases including research, education, and community heart programs.

Use Money for Research
Since 1948, the American Heart Association, its affiliates, and chapters, have channeled almost $20 million into research. Most of the funds have been used toward discovering the basic causes and controls of rheumatic fever, high blood pressure, and hardening of the arteries, which together account for more than 90 per cent of all heart diseases.

Through its program of public education, the heart association seeks to eliminate fears and misconceptions concerning the disease, and to encourage early diagnosis and treatment.

Research Benefits
The benefits of research are brought to individuals through community heart programs, as well as through their physicians. The programs are designed to protect healthy hearts, and to enable heart sufferers to live as useful members of society.

Activities include improvement of diagnostic facilities, rehabilitation of industrial workers with heart disease, prevention of rheumatic fever, and work simplification programs to ease the burdens of cardiac housewives.

Financed by Public
The association's program is financed entirely by voluntary contributions from the public. The principle source of funds is the annual Heart Fund campaign, conducted by the affiliates, chapters, and local committees during February.

Other important financial contributions come through legacies, bequests, and memorial gifts received throughout the year.

Baker Withdraws From Carter Fight

NEW YORK, No. 12 (P)—Bob Baker, Pittsburgh heavyweight, was forced to withdraw today from Friday's Madison Square Garden match with Harold Carter of Linden, N.J., sending matchmaker Billy Brown scurrying for a substitute.

The International Boxing Club said Baker had suffered a virus attack. If a suitable sub cannot be lined up, an entire new match may be made for the date, subject to approval by the New York State Athletic Commission.

LITTLE STORIES WITH BIG MORALS

First Little Story

Once upon a time when the inventors of the airplane were very small boys, the roof on their house developed a terrible leak. A repairman was called to fix it. He set his ladder against the side of the house, but it was a very tall house and his ladder was not quite long enough to reach the roof.

"Sir, we have an idea," said the boys who even at that tender age were resourceful little chaps. "We will get up on top of the ladder and boost you up on the roof."

So the boys climbed to the top of the ladder, and the repairman came after them, and they tried to boost him up on the roof. But, alas, the plan did not work and they all came tumbling down in a heap.

MORAL: Two Wrights don't make a rung.

Second Little Story

Once upon a time a German exchange student came from Old Heidelberg to an American university. One night there was a bull session going on in the room next to his. "Ach, excuse me," he said timidly to the group of young men assembled there, "aber what is that heavenly smell I smell?"

"Why, that is the fragrant aroma of our Philip Morris cigarettes," said one of the men.

"Himmel, such natural tobacco goodness!"

"It comes in regular size in the handy Snap-Open pack, or in long size in the new crushproof box. . . . Won't you try one?"

"Dankeschön," said the German exchange student happily, and from that night forward, whenever the men lit up Philip Morris Cigarettes, he never failed to be present.

MORAL: Where there's smoke, there's Meyer.

Third Little Story

Once upon a time Penelope, the wife of Ulysses, had herself a mess of trouble in Ithaca. With her husband away at the Trojan War, all the local blades were wooing Penelope like crazy. She stalled them by saying she wouldn't make her choice until she finished weaving a rug. Each night when her suitors had gone home, Penelope, that sly minx, would unravel all the weaving she had done during the day.

Why don't you hide in this Urn?

Well sir, one night she left her rug lying outside. It rained buckets, and the rug got all matted and shrunken, and Penelope couldn't unwind it. When the suitors came back in the morning, the poor frantic woman started running all over the house looking for a place to hide.

Well sir, it happened that Sappho, the poetess, had come over the night before to write an ode about Penelope's Grecian urn. So she said, "Hey, Penelope, why don't you hide in this urn? I think it's big enough if you'll kind of squinch down."

So Penelope hopped in the urn, and it concealed her perfectly except for her hair-do which was worn upswept in the Greek manner.

Well sir, with the suitors pounding on the door, Sappho had to move fast. She whipped out a razor and cut off Penelope's hair. The suitors looked high and low but they couldn't find Penelope.

MORAL: A Penny shaved is a Penny urned.
