Bahrenburg Asks Letters On Yule Cut

All-University President Robert Bahrenburg said, in effect last night, that 2000 letters from parents asking extension of the Christmas recess could bring about a longer vacation.

Bahrenburg told about 1500 students at the North Carolina State pep rally that, if he is armed with 2000 letters, along with safety facts already in his possession, when he appears before the University Senate Dec. 4, "I don't think you'll have to hang your stockings up at Thanksgiving."

He was referring to one of the many remarks expressed at the pep rally knocking the short recess. In addition to the usual pre-game banners such as, "Trounce the Wolfpack," signs appeared reading, "Extend the Xmas Vacation, and "More Vacation."

Bahrenburg said the letters would "mean more than anything I can say or any other student can say" to bring about an extended recess. He asked that the letters be addressed to him and be turned in at the Hetzel Union desk no later than Nov. 26.

Bahrenburg cited safety hazards—particularly a high New Year's Day death toll—to the students. Forty per cent of the student body, living out of state or at its eastern and western edges would have a "heck of a time getting back here," he said.

Halfbacks Billy Kane and Ray Alberigi and center Dan Radakovich spoke briefly at the rally, which also featured the antics of Alfred Klimcke, the Nittany Lion, as a North Carolina State official.

Captain Sam Valentine drew the name of Susan Mamolen, sophomore in education from Williamsport, as winner of a crew-neck sweater set. The drawing was sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, woman's journalism society.

Grid Flash Card Leaders Happy With Performance

The flash card system will not be used for the football game today since the leaders feel the system has accomplished its purpose for this year.

Co-chairmen Merle Brooks and Sally Jervis said they feel the original object of putting the system into effect so late in the season this year was to prove the feasibility of such a system at the University.

They feel with the two performances, it has proven itself successful. Steps will now be taken to perfect the system.

The chairmen, cheerleaders and any interested persons will meet immediately after Thanksgiving to make plans for the system next year.

16 Seniors To Play In Home Finale

By FRAN FANUCCI Collegian Sports Editor

Penn State and North Carolina State haven't played each other since 1924 and yet today's game shapes up as one of the East's fiercest rivalries.

Approximately 20,000 fans will see the Lions, boasting 10 Pennsylvanians in their starting lineup, meet a southern school, with eight Pennsylvania players in its lineup. Since the Wolfpack is dominated by so many Pennsylvanians and former teammates of Lion players it is apparently simple that it would like nothing finer than to beat the Lions.

But the oddsmakers tend to disagree with the Wolfpack attitude for they have installed the Lions as 20-point favorites for today's final home game for the Lions.

It will be Coach Rip Engle's straight-T versus the complicated multiple offense of NCS and former Lion Coach Earl Edwards. Engle, whose name was synonymous with the split-T the past few years, has used the straight-T to great advantage this year, racking up five wins against two losses.

Edwards, meanwhile, has had his share of bad luck, being able to notch only three wins in eight outings this season. But along with his two coaching aides—Bill Smaltz and Al Michaels, both former Lion coaches—Edwards' knowledge of Lion football could prove advantageous to a possible upset win today.

But if the bad weather, which has dominated the Nittany Valley the past two days persists, the light backfield of the Wolfpack could definitely be handicapped.

The weather report for today forecasts strong wind and snow, a deterrent to any good passing team such as the Lions and NCS.

The Lions are more ably manned with heavy backs and would appear to have a decided edge if the field should become a mud bowl. Quarterback Milt Plum's strong passing attack has always been one of the Lions' better points, providing the team

Campaign Way Short of Goal; Contributions Still Incomplete

By ANNE FRIEDBERG University students contributed $2382.39 to this year's Campus Chest solicitations drive by 9 p.m. yesterday. This figure fell short of the $12,000 goal by $9617.61.

However, these returns represented reports from only 130 out of approximately 425 solicitors. There are 295 solicitors who still have to make returns. The drive officially ended at 11 p.m. yesterday.

Edward Long, tabulations chairman, said that members of the executive committee will collect returns from 6 to 10 tonight in the lounge opposite the Hetzel Union desk.

Not All Returns In

He said that if not all returns are received today, committee members will also collect returns on Tuesday in the Hetzel Union Building.

If complete returns are not made at that time, individual solicitors will be contacted personally by the executive committee for reports of returns.

Main contenders for the fraternity trophy last night were Phi Gamma Delta and Beta Sigma Rho. Contenders for the sorority trophy were Sigma Delta Tau and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Definite winners will be announced early next week.

Both the sorority groups conducted special events this week to raise funds for Campus Chest in

Snowy Weather Predicted Today

The Nittany Lion, when he arose early this morning to get a good seat at the football game, almost dove back into his warm bed.

When he stuck his nose out the front door, it immediately turned a deep blue, not in commemoration of the school colors, but because of the forecast 38 degree temperature.

But, being a hardy soul filled with spirit, he bundled up in his heavy top-coat and scarf and ventured forth into the expected light snow.

The weatherman tried to help the Lion and other football fans by forecasting the end of snow early in the morning but said he could do nothing about wintry winds that should prevail all day.

addition to their chapter contributions. Sigma Delta Tau shined shoes at the Main Gate and in fraternity houses, and Kappa Kappa Gamma washed cars at fraternity houses.

Long said that he could not definitely announce the winners of the fraternity and sorority trophies because less than half of the fraternity contributions had been turned in.

He also said that the winner of the independent living unit trophy was still looming because so many of these contributions have not yet been handed in to the executive committee.

Basis for Selection

The winner of the independent living unit trophy will be computed on the basis of greatest average contributions per capita.

The strongest point for contributions throughout the entire drive was the sororities. "Sororities were much stronger on the whole than fraternities," Long said.

The weakest areas for contributions to date were found in Atherton Hall, and the Tri-dorm area including Jordan, Watts, and Irvin.

Long praised men in the Nittany area saying they did a "very fine job." He also complimented town independent men who contributed to the drive.

Asylum Offered To Hungarians

VIENNA, Nov. 16 (AP)—Less than 1000 Hungarian refugees have taken advantage of the offer of admission to the United States.

Washington has offered 5000 visas to Hungarians who fled from the Russian onslaught, but the number of applications in Vienna has been quite small.

Officials gave a variety of reasons for the lack of demand. One is that most of the 50,000 refugees in Austria are being held in transit camps and cannot reach consulates to make their applications.

National Library Seeks Centennial Anniversary Film

The Library of Congress has requested a print of the film "Centennial," which was produced for the 100th anniversary of the University, for permanent deposit.

The film, produced by the Motion Picture and Recording Studio, echoes the small beginnings of the University as The Farmers' High School of Pennsylvania, reviews the struggling years of development and growth and suggests the possible impact of the University on the future. It is a 16 mm film in full color and runs 23 minutes.

Frank S. Neusbaum, administrative head of the studio, explains that when films produced by the Studio are copyrighted, the Library of Congress returns the two copies submitted for the copyright with the stipulation that they can be recalled for permanent deposit in the Library if they are desired.

The Library to date has requested for permanent deposit at least six of the films produced by the University.
