Hospital Is Far Cry From 'Pest House'

By EVIE ONSA
 Collegian Feature Editor

The facilities available to sick, injured, and exhausted students at the University have expanded considerably since the days of the "Pest House," the first hospital to be built on campus.

The first "hospital" was a frame structure cut from half of a barracks-like dormitory. It was located between the Armory and the Electrical Engineering Building.

Today, with the completion of the nearly $1 million wings of the infirmary this semester, students have a well-equipped hospital and a staff of eight physicians, a dentist, a pharmacist, and 15 graduate nurses to care for them.

First Patient

The first patient, a sophomore in chemistry, was admitted in 1907 and treated for pneumonia. After one year the "Pest House" was moved to the woods west of New Beaver field and was used as an isolation ward for students with contagious diseases, hence the name "Pest House." It was abandoned after four years.

An epidemic of scarlet fever in 1912 showed the need for an organized medical service. After a delay of three years because of finances a residence, known as Beecher House today, was converted into an infirmary for students requiring medical care. The first floor was used as a dispensary and the second floor contained eight beds.

Infirmary Opened in 1929

In 1929 with money advanced by the State College Women's Club, the Potato Growers of Pennsylvania, and other friends of the institution, a 30-bed infirmary was opened with every facility except that required for major surgery.

The University's growing pains caused by increased enrollment have made it necessary to construct two additional wings. Last year out of an enrollment of more than 12,000 students, 8,851 used the health service for a total of 32,231 visits.

Dr. Herbert R. Glenn, director of health service, said that 60 per cent of the University's student

Prof to Talk On Yule Art

Dr. Harold Dickson, professor of fine arts, will give several lectures dealing with Christmas art during December.

He will deliver an illustrated talk at the annual banquet of the University chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic society, Dec. 6 at the Autoport. It will be entitled "The Iconography of the Nativity."

He will also address a noon luncheon on Dec. 8 at a meeting of the Philadelphia Alumni Club at the Hotel Belgravia, Philadelphia, on "The Nativity in Art."

Dr. Dickson will speak on the same topic at 10:45 a.m. on Dec. 9 before the State College Unitarian Society in Odd Fellows Hall.

He also will deliver this illustrated lecture at the meeting of the State College American Association of University Women at 8 p.m. on Dec. 13 in Houts' auditorium.

Incorrect Address Slows Post Office

If you're not receiving the mail you think you should be receiving or if it's always late, it may be your fault, the University post office says.

Students living in campus residence halls can help prompt delivery of their mail, especially during the Yule rush, by advising correspondents of their correct address, the post office said.

The proper address includes the name of the residence hall and the assigned mail box number as well as the name of the student and the post office.

A time-consuming search could be avoided if all students would inform their correspondents of their correct address.

Eng Council to Discuss Plans for 'Newsletter'

The Engineering and Architecture Student Council will discuss the committee plans for re-organization of the Newsletter at the meeting at 7:15 tonight in 217 Hetzel Union.

The council members will meet first at 7 in the Penn State Photo Shop for a group LaVie picture. The council will meet in 217 HUB directly following this.

BizAd Bulletin Edit Staff

The editorial staff of the BizAd Bulletin will meet at 6:30 tonight in 13 Sparks. Assignments will be bade for the next issue.

Art Ed Group Will Meet

The Art Ed Studio Club will meet at 7 tonight in Temporary building.
