

30-Day Completion Seen For Nittany Teamroom

By TERRY LEACH

Construction of the Nittany team room for students of the Nittany-Pollock area will be completed within a month, according to Walter H. Wiegand, director of physical plant.

The team room is complete except for installation of interior equipment. The building will house a shower room and locker room.

Construction of four new women's dormitories and a dining hall south of Simmons Hall is running a month behind schedule, according to a spokesman for the construction company.

Several of the dormitories were scheduled for occupancy next fall. Present plans call for the project to be completed by June of 1958.

The company spokesman said rain and two-thirds more limestone called for than the company originally calculated delayed the project. Work was also delayed by a labor strike.

To House 1100

When complete the four identical four-floor dormitories will house approximately 1100 women. The two-story dining hall will provide eating facilities for the dormitories.

Construction of the Hall of the Americas office and classroom building is progressing well after a delay because of stonework, according to Wiegand. The General State Authority, which is directing the project, rejected a shipment of stone needed for the front of the building.

2 Months Behind

The building was originally scheduled for completion Feb. 15 but, according to Wiegand, it is two months behind schedule. It will contain four floors of classrooms and three floors of offices.

The University and borough joint sewer plant, under construction at the duckpond, the site of the old sewer plants, will be operating by July, according to Wiegand. The plant will be owned by the University and its facilities rented to the borough.

Infirmiry Almost Complete
The new plant will contain trickling filter and vacuum sludge removal for disposal of sewage.

Construction of two additional wings to the University infirmiry is complete except for the installation of a kitchen in the east wing, Wiegand said. The west wing is in operation.

After the installing of the kitchen, which is expected to be completed by Christmas, sections of the original infirmiry will be used as storage rooms for records.

An addition to the Animal research laboratory located on the University farms is going according to schedule and will be complete by May 15, Wiegand said.

Ed Students Favor TV Classes in Poll

A questionnaire taken in an Education 1 class last week revealed that a majority of the students in the class preferred to be in television rooms rather than a large lecture room.

For the first seven weeks of the semester the class met in 10 Sparks. The closed television circuit was used to enable students in the back of the room to see visual aids Dr. Abram W. Vandermeer, professor of education, used in the lecture.

During the second six weeks of the semester students were placed in television rooms according to their curriculums. The visual aids and content of the course was not altered with the change in origination of the lecture.

166 Polled

The questionnaire was filled out by 166 students. One hundred-seven of these students voted to stay in the television rooms for the remainder of the semester, 59 students preferred to return to Room 10 for the class.

As revealed by the questionnaire, students felt that there was more advantage for questions and discussion in the large lecture room and the class was more personalized. Some students thought it was easier to pay attention in Room 10 than in a television room.

Disadvantages found in the large lecture room included visibility, acoustics, and the size of the class.

Lack of order in both lecture room and television rooms was noted on a number of questionnaires. Twenty-eight students from the entire class elected to move into another television room.

Eng Prof Granted Patent for Pump

Dr. Wolfgang E. Meyer, professor of engineering research, has been granted a patent on a fuel injection pump.

The features of this pump make it particularly suitable for 8-cylinder gasoline and diesel engines in that the number of elements and parts is independent of the number of engine cylinders to which fuel is to be supplied.

'Blood Wedding' Set To Open Tuesday

The thesis production of "Blood Wedding," by Federico Garcia Lorcas, will be presented at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in the Little Theatre in Old Main.

The play, a Spanish tragedy, will be directed by Virginia Gore, graduate student in theatre arts from Burlington, Iowa, as partial fulfillment of her graduate thesis.

Miss Gore has also set some of the poetic lines of the play to music, designed the costumes and sets, and created the dance choreography.

Garcia, author of "House of Bernard Alba" and "Yerma", is noted for his unusual combining of poetry and prose in his play scripts. In "Blood Wedding," he has made his characters into symbols instead of individuals and through these symbols has reflected the customs and beliefs of the Spanish people.

Symbolic Nature

Elements of music, lighting, colors, and costumes are used to suggest this play's symbolic nature. In several scenes, Garcia creates a fantastic atmosphere by using the characters such as the Moon and the Beggar Woman to symbolize Life and Death.

"Blood Wedding," develops in seven scenes the sense of human fatality, a basic concept in Spanish thinking. It is the story of the Bride, who on her wedding day leaves the Bridegroom and runs away with Leonardo, the lover in her life. The Bridegroom, urged on by his powerful Mother, chases the runaways, finds them in a forest, and kills Leonardo.

Cast Members

Members of the cast are Bruce Taylor as Leonardo; Jack Timmis, the Bridegroom; Delmar Hendricks, the Moon; Helen Cummings, the Servant; Elizabeth Ives, the Bride; Eleanor Blumberg, the Mother-in-law; Millis Merschon, the Wife; Patricia Paladio, the Beggarwoman; George Cavey, the Father; Kathryn Kelleher, the Mother; Jayne Mort and Elizabeth Harned, the Girls; Janet Bean, the Neighbor.

Prof Bares Hamilton's 'Unprintables'

By MARIAN BEATTY

When the Republican party members celebrate Alexander Hamilton's 200th birthday next month, they are sure to be ignorant of many interesting, but highly unprintable, details, H. Trevor Colbourn told the Young Democrats Thursday night.

Colbourn, an instructor in history, told the group that the Republicans have established a bicentennial committee to honor Hamilton as a founding father of the nation and the Republican party.

Since the committee will undoubtedly ignore most of Hamilton's private life, Colbourn said, he planned to start at the bottom in exposing "the idol's feet of clay."

The first fault in the celebration lies not with Hamilton, he began, but with the committee. The festivities are already two years late, as most records indicate that Hamilton was born in 1755, not 1757. The confusion arises from the fact that, for a very sound reason, Hamilton falsified his age, Colbourn said.

Hamilton was hailed as a prodigy in grammar school, and declared the youngest man ever to receive a commission as a captain in the army. Not wanting to destroy this shining illusion, Hamilton deftly topped two years from his age, Colbourn said.

The committee will commemorate the establishment of the United States Bank, and even the Whiskey Rebellion. However, Colbourn continued, there will be no mention of Hamilton's questionable parentage or his life-long attraction to women.

Colbourn emphasized this attraction by reading spicy fragments from Hamilton's letters. As a bachelor, Hamilton once wrote that his future wife must be "beautiful, shapely, and above all, wealthy."

The committee, which he said will spend half a million dollars during 1957, is already being eyed with suspicion by Democrats, Colbourn said. This suspicion, he explained, arises chiefly from the fact that Thomas Jefferson, patron saint of the Democrat party, has been devaluated from the three-cent to the two-cent postal stamp.

In general, a far better date to celebrate would be July 11, 1804, Colbourn suggested. On that day, Hamilton was shot by Aaron Burr.
