Twenty-six fraternities will hold Christmas parties for children, according to a report given to the Interfraternity Council Monday night.

Children from 19 communities in the area will attend the parties, which are co-sponsored by sororities of independent women, in most cases. Santa Claus will appear at most of the parties to distribute toys or clothing to the children.

The parties, conducted under the auspices of IFC, are annual events. James Corrigan, senior in business administration from Hazleton, is chairman of this year's program.
